Ford Parleys For 1st Time As Hopes Rise To End Strike

Talks 'Encourage' Gov. Van Wagoner; Hard Coal Operators Refuse Wage Demand

Dramatic and dynamic moves yesterday marked the Nation's efforts to lighten the drag of labor disturbances on armament production.

In a day that had good points and bad points, encouraging responses and disconcerting lags, these situations stood out:

1 The Ford Motor Co. broke all precedent and participated in a conference with the head of the C. I. O., designed to end the shutdown of Ford plants that has left 200,000 workmen idle. As a result of "encouraging" negotiations, Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner persuaded the Federal Government to delay certification of the Ford tie-up to the National Defense Mediation Board, in hope that the strike could be settled on the spot. Page 7.

2. Negotiators failed again to produce a contract agreeable to all groups in the week-old work stoppage in the country's bituminous coal mines. Southern operators continued to resist elimination of the wage differential they have enjoyed heretofore. At the same time, anthracite mine operators rejected proposals of their 100,000 employes for $1 a day wage boost, and offered only a two-year renewal of the existing contract with slight modifications. Page 8.

3. Secretary of Labor Perkins certified to the Defense Mediation Board the new strike at the Phelps-Dodge Copper Products Corporation, at Elizabeth, N. J., where 1,800 employes have stopped work on defense contracts aggregating $30,000,000. It is the second strike there in two weeks.

4. The National Labor Relations Board announced the start of contempt of court proceedings against Bethlehem Steel Co., its president, Eugene Grace, and other officers, on the charge that the company had recognized an allegedly company-dominated union whose disestablishment had been ordered by the board. The union is in the company's Fore River, Mass., shipyards. At the same time, three Bethlehem stockholders criticized the company's labor policy at a Wilmington, Del., meeting. Page 7.

5. Sidney Hillman, OPM associate director, told the House Military Affairs Committee it is not helping the defense program to assert that Communists are in control "every time a strike breaks out." He and William H. Davis, vice chairman of the Mediation Board, testified that legislation against strikes is not needed at present. Page 6.

6. "Work stoppages" occurred during the day at Cleveland plants of the Aluminum Company of America in a dispute over discharge of a worker in the sand foundry. The company termed it a "sit-down strike." Last night, however, normal work had been resumed.

Missing Navy Bomber Fell In Sea; 10 Lost

By International News Service

Norfolk, Va., April 8.—Returning from the scene of the crash at sea of a Navy patrol bomber in which ten officers and men perished, the destroyer Lansdale put into Norfolk Navy Yard late tonight with the bodies of two victims and the shattered plane's wreckage.

Navy hospital officials, who took charge of the remains, said identification would be impossible until fingerprints were checked. The bodies were badly mutilated. What appeared to be portions of other bodies also were recovered.

The Navy officially listed as dead all the men aboard the plane—a PBY-1 patrol bomber. Grim remnants of the plane and its equipment were recovered from the water near where the plane was believed to have spun into the sea, about 20 miles northeast of Cape Charles, Va., two miles offshore. It was submerged in 30 feet of water.

Lieut. Julian Boit, aide to the Navy Yard commandant, said:

"We have given up all hope that any one who was aboard is alive."

The Lansdale, which had dragged the surrounding waters for hours before returning to Norfolk, prepared to put to sea again in an ef-

Funds Sought to Meet Defense Crisis Here

The District Commissioners yesterday began a study of added budget requests from their department heads amounting to $5,687,000.

Need for the funds, the Commissioners said, is created primarily by the defense program and the resultant growth of Washington. However, they added frankly that they did not know how the additional load could be financed.

They indicated that they believed the best solution was the adoption of the Overton formula, or some similar method of increasing the Federal payment to the District.

Proposals filed by the department executives at the request of the city heads include a proposed provision of nearly $2,000,000 for school construction and funds for 100 extra policemen, 38 more firemen and additional guards at the Jail, Workhouse and Reformatory.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland also asked for a Northwest health center and expanded service at the Health Department administration units, at the Tuberculosis Sanatoria and at Gallinger Hospital.

Welfare officials asked for an additional $1,031,250 covering a wide

Greek Fight 'Heroic,' Berlin Says; Stukas Blast Airfields

By C. Brooks Peters.

Berlin, April 8.—The first positive indications of the immediate tactical implications of Germany's drive on the southeastern front were disclosed in Berlin today.

They revealed that advanced units of the Reich's forces have traversed more than half the distance across Yugoslavia from Bulgaria to Albania. The objective of this push appears obviously to be the joining of forces with Italy in Albania, thus cutting all lines of land communications between the Serbian forces and the latter's allies in Greece to the south.

Spearheads of German forces, which apparently entered Yugoslavia through the Kriva Pass on the southern Bulgarian-Yugoslav frontier, were reported to have taken Skoplje. The latter city is more than 50 miles from the Bulgarian border and halfway to Albania.

If the practice of the Germans in previous campaigns is followed, the announcement of the capture of Skoplje means that German advance units are already beyond that city on their westward march.

[Nis, a key railway center on the Morava River, has been occupied by the Germans, according to unconfirmed reports from Budapest, capital of German-dominated Hungary, an Associated Press dispatch said.]

Other German forces, meanwhile, are believed to be advancing on Belgrade. Their progress, it is suggested, continues satisfactorily.

A third German push began Sunday morning along the Austrian-Yugoslav frontier. How far it has progressed is not known, but it appears to have as its immediate objective Zagreb, the Croat capital on the north Adriatic.

Location of British Remains a Puzzle

Whereabouts of the British army on the Balkan front remained something of a puzzle last night.

Winston Burdette, CBS correspondent at Ankara, Turkey, reported in a broadcast heard in New York by the Columbia Broadcasting System that between 40,000 and 60,000 British have been sent into positions to face the German attack in the north of Greece. He said the British were massed in and around Katerine, southwest of Salonika, when the Germans launched their attacks Palm Sunday.

A Berlin spokesman, declaring the Germans had had no clashes with British troops in the Balkans, added: "Perhaps we will have to issue a formal invitation for the British to come out and fight."

More Speed Needed in Defense Work, Roosevelt Declares

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The progress of national defense is still unsatisfactory to President Roosevelt, even though it has been more than twice as great in the first three months of this year than in the entire last half of 1941, according to figures he cited to his press conference yesterday.

Mr. Roosevelt twice emphasized that in quoting the figures he did not mean to give the impression he was pointing with pride, and that on the contrary, he was far from satisfied at the rate, which was still much too slow, leaving an enormous amount of work yet to be done.

He read figures on Federal disbursements for acquisitions of defense materials and construction of armament plants and defense facilities which revealed that in the last six months of 1940, the Government had spent $1,400,000,000 for these purposes. In the first three months of this year, however, Federal disbursements were $1,800,000,000.

The President pointed out that in the new basis of showing progress, the Federal disbursements were not made until the work was done, and that thus the expenditures were for goods which have been delivered and for construction which has been completed.

In a partial breakdown of the totals, Mr. Roosevelt revealed that

Roosevelt Wants to Buy Danish Ships

Will Ask Congress For Legislation; Defends Seizure of Axis Vessels

BULLETIN

Mexico City, April 8 (AP).—President Avila Camacho issued a decree tonight expropriating the 12 German and Italian merchant ships taken in custody by the Mexican Navy at Tampico and Vera Cruz.

(See Plain Words, by Ernest K. Lindley, Page 11.)

By Edward T. Folliard

President Roosevelt tomorrow will ask Congress for legislation for the purchase of 36 Danish ships recently seized in American ports.

The President made this known at his press conference yesterday afternoon, and at the same time—in the face of a new German protest—insisted that the United States had a legal right to take over and operate two German and 28 Italian ships. He implied that this would be done with the seized Axis ships.

In the midst of the shipping crisis, which has been further dramatized by President Roosevelt's promise yesterday to Yugoslavia's King Peter II of speedy material aid under the Lend-Lease Act, Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. N. (retired), went on the air last night and made a speech which may turn out to be highly significant.

Admiral Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission and a close friend of President Roosevelt, put squarely up to the American people the question of whether the United States could not better aid Great Britain by helping to "put out the fire" of the German submarine menace.

In his talk, which almost certainly was prepared with the knowledge of President Roosevelt, Ad-

Port a Flaming Ruin, Returning Pilots Say

By the Associated Press

London, April 8.—The British announced tonight their warplanes rained "the heaviest load of bombs on Germany in a single night" in last night's blow at Kiel, cradle of many of the submarines ravaging the empire's vital shipping lanes.

"Hundreds of tons of high explosives and more than 30,000 incendiaries" were rained on the German port and submarine building yards, the air ministry said, in detailing a heavy blow against warships which have helped to send British and British-controlled shipping losses to a year's high of nearly 150,000 tons during two of the last five weeks.

For five hours, the announcement continued, "wave after wave" of British bombers pounded Kiel, leaving "glowing shells of warehouses" on the waterfront and huge buildings "wholly enveloped in flames."

"The submarine yards evidently suffered greatly. A great building in the Deutsche-Werke shipyards was seen to collapse and in the town itself the ruin was almost as wide-

Derna Taken In Axis Thrust

Called Reply to Aid Plan of Roosevelt

By the United Press

Rome, April 8.—A lightning 450-mile thrust by German and Italian mechanized columns across the Libyan desert, recapturing the port of Derna, was hailed tonight as the Axis answer to President Roosevelt's plan to send American ships into the Red Sea.

The taking of Derna, 170 miles northeast of Bengasi, from the retreating British was announced today in a special high command communique.

Reports from Berlin said the axis forces also had taken Tobruk, 150 miles east of Derna, but they lacked confirmation.

Should it continue, authoritative sources believed, it will become a serious threat against Cairo and the Suez Canal and conceivably might block any shipments of American supplies to the British and their allies in the Balkans through the Red Sea and the canal.

The Yugoslav broadcast, which said that "a greater part of Belgrade is in ruins" after merciless Nazi bombing attacks, was the first direct word from Belgrade by radio or otherwise since before the launching of the German attack on Yugoslavia and Greece at dawn Sunday.

"From news received so far on all fronts, the situation is in our favor," the C. B. S. quoted the broadcast Yugoslav communique.

"Four enemy attacks have been repulsed with the greatest vigor, inflicting on the enemy heavy losses. Our air force achieved special distinction in the encounters with the enemy."

Hellenic Army In East Caught In Trap, Athens Bulletin Admits

By Ben Ames.
United Press Staff Writer

Athens (Wednesday), April 9.—Greek forces today began abandoning the Salonika region and control of the upper Aegean to the German blitzkrieg under a tide of German assaults from three sides, unleashed by collapse of the Yugoslav army in the Vardar Valley, it was stated officially.

Overwhelming Nazi panzer forces swept down the Vardar Valley to within about 23 miles of Salonika itself after the Yugoslav collapse on the Greek left flank, and the Greek high command admitted that its forces east of Salonika had been trapped.

While scattered Greek forces still held out around Rupel Pass near the Struma Valley frontier of Greece and Bulgaria, Greek shock troops battled savagely to stem the furious German assault around Kilkis, 23 miles north of Salonika, and cover the withdrawal of the main Greek army, it was stated.

Serb Division Encircled

The Greek high command blamed the Serbian army's collapse along the Vardar in southern Yugoslavia for the Salonika break-through of the Germans, but few details of the disaster were revealed.

However, at least one entire Serbian division was known to have been encircled, so swift did the German armored forces sweep westward from the Bulgarian border in a 50-mile drive.

The German drive on Salonika was a three-pronged affair—down the Vardar, from Lake Doiran at the Yugoslav frontier directly north and from Rupel Pass to the northeast, it was stated by the Greek high command.

Greek resistance was engulfed by the overwhelming numbers and weapons of the Germans, it was said.

Greeks Fall Back West

Early today the Greek army of Macedonia was said to be rapidly collecting its war materials and supplies and falling back to form a new defense line west of Salonika and the Vardar. The withdrawal was ordered to escape entrapment in the narrow "finger" of Greece stretching 200 or more miles eastward from Salonika to the Turkish frontier.

Calling the Salonika situation "dangerous," the Greek high command said a German mechanized division (about 11,000 troops, 350 tanks and 3,000 other vehicles) reached the Greek frontier through Yugoslavia Monday evening and occupied Dorian.

At dawn Tuesday the Germans struck, sweeping down mountain corridors near the Vardar and overwhelming "very small Greek mechanized formations which fought an unequal battle against an enemy superior both in quantity and quality."

One Fort Recaptured

"This effort to slow down the enemy advance lasted several hours," it was stated.

Indicating that it places full responsibility of the break through in Yugoslavia, the Greek high command pointed out that small Greek forces in the Struma Valley to the "heroic" resistance from their Greek foe. The German forces are believed, yesterday, to have broken the line of the Maginot type Greek fortification in the Struma Valley on the Bulgarian border. How deeply they have penetrated into enemy territory in this sector is not known, but the topography is acknowledgedly terrific.

Attack Called Successful

Regarding the land fighting on all sectors the German high command's communique declared merely:

"In spite of numerous difficulties caused by the terrain and the destruction of numerous roads the attack of the German troops on the Serbian and Greek front was carried out with success against tenacious enemy resistance."

With the taking of Skoplje, the Germans appear to have dealt the enemy a serious blow for this city of some 70,000 inhabitants, in south Serbia, is the main junction of the lines of communication between Bosnia and Serbia and the southeast—that is, Greece and Salonika. The largest troop barracks in south Serbia are also located in Skoplje, which commands an entrance to the important Vardar Valley, running south eastward to Salonika.

Should the German forces succeed in continuing their advance westward or southwestward, they will meet their Italian allies in Albania and thus cut the Greek forces off from the major portion of the Yugoslav army.

Have Met No British

The Germans declare, however, that in no sector have they yet encountered British troops on the ground. This, they add, is most extraordinary because the British brought the Yugoslavs and Greeks into their present difficult situation and the latter have found themselves for days in most heavy engagements.

"German quarters consider the supposition not unfounded," writes the semiofficial service from Germany, "that the English leadership at the present initiatory stages of the southeast European campaign is taking the precaution of not losing contact with a suitable harbor for retreat."

The German high command reports that the German air force carried out large-scale assignments in the southeast yesterday. In the territory about Skoplje, for example, German planes bombed and strafed enemy infantry and truck columns. Stukas, it is believed, participated actively in these attacks.

Despite inclement weather, the German high command continues, German planes in rolling waves continued their bombing of military objectives in the "fortress" Belgrade. The main railway station with its auxiliary appointments is said again to have been hit, and new fires of larger dimensions started.

Enemy airfields in Serbia, the German high command declared, were attacked by dive-bombers and destroyed. Thirty-two enemy planes were destroyed on the ground and two others damaged, the Germans report. In the Sava sector—in the northeastern tip of Yugoslavia—the German high command adds, its bombers destroyed railroad bridges, railroad stations and tracks and directly hit transports and gasoline tank trains.

German pursuit planes are said to have shot down 20 enemy airplanes, while one Bristol-Blenheim bomber is reported to have been forced to land in the Oststeiermark.

The official news agency declares that all important Yugoslav air fields have been systematically bombed by German planes. In view of the limited strength of the enemy's air force, moreover, D. N. D. adds, and the fact that Yugoslavia has no airplane industries of its own, but must import all its planes, a significant weakening of the enemy's entire strength has already been effected.

The Germans emphasize that the main theater of war for them continues to be the British Isles. Strong forces of the German air force yesterday continued their attacks on Britain and nearby waters. Last night "several hundred" German bombers engaged in a heavy attack on numerous vital war objectives in Britain.

east had "foiled all attempts of the attacking forces" and even recaptured one fort and several other positions from the Germans.

Western Thrace, closest to the Turkish border, was abandoned to the Germans Monday, giving them an outlet to the Aegean and cutting off Greece's land link with her potential Turkish ally.

The German break-through to the Vardar Valley in the narrow southern "neck" of Yugoslavia not only forced the Greeks to fall back westward from Salonika and the Vardar River to escape entrapment, but threatened to slice Yugoslavia in two at its narrowest point.

At Skoplje, on the Vardar, the Nazi panzer forces would be only about 45 miles from a junction with Italy's army in Albania.

Italians Prepare to Attack

(The Fascist forces in Albania, in trip-hammer liaison with the German push across Serbia and down upon Salonika, were reported in other Balkan dispatches to be ready to launch an attack on Florina in northern Greece, only 60 miles west of the Vardar, in a huge nutcracker operation against the Greek and British forces.)

Greek travelers arriving here from bomb-shattered Belgrade told of a fierce dive-bombing attack on Skoplje, 85 miles north of the Greek-Yugoslav frontier in Macedonia, that wrecked portions of the town.

(The Greeks' disclosure that they are falling back to a new defense line west of Salonika indicated that their "Metaxas line" had been abandoned. The British forces in Greece were believed to be in positions west of Salonika and the Vardar River.)

The Greek high command, making no attempts to hide the seriousness of the situation, announced in a communique early today that the Germans, after capturing Dorian, drove through Yugoslavia and Greece toward Salonika.

Communications Severed

"Communications between the Greek forces in eastern Macedonia with the rest of our country have been severed," the high command said, without revealing the numbers of Greek forces entrapped below the Bulgarian frontier.

The Greek high command said that the Germans were driving down the Vardar Valley—historic route of invasion—to points "dangerously near" Salonika.

The Greek battlefront has been suddenly shifted westward to the rugged area between the Vardar and Struma Rivers directly above Salonika.

Furiously bombing British planes, cooperating with veteran Greek mountaineer warriors, struggled to prevent the Germans from sweeping down through the Ghevgheli Pass in force to join the Germans battling the Greeks at Kilkis.

"Vastly Outnumbered"

Ghevgheli Pass is along the Vardar Valley and main railroad just across the Yugoslav border and about 28 miles north of Kilkis.

The Greek forces attempting to dam the flood of the German "blitzkrieg" down the Vardar from Yugoslavia into the Salonika region were said to be "vastly outnumbered" now that the Serbian forces have fallen back.

North of Kilkis during Tuesday the Greeks had stubbornly battled the German forces, a military spokesman said, and had recaptured from superior Nazi forces two more forts lost to the Germans Monday.

Details of the Serbian collapse along the Vardar where the Germans thrust about 50 miles into Yugoslavia from Bulgaria in two columns were lacking in Athens but it was learned that at least one entire Serbian division of about 18,000 troops had been encircled, so swift was the Nazi thrust.

Visualized for Weeks

Once in the Vardar Valley it was an easy matter for the German panzer forces to thrust on down to Ghevgheli and the broad plains of the lower Vardar which they reached late Tuesday afternoon.

The evacuation of all of Greek Thrace east of the Vardar, giving the Germans control of the top of the Aegean Sea, had been visualized for weeks, it was asserted in Greek military quarters.

This evacuation may "in case of dire necessity be extended to include other important seacoast areas," it was stated.

Just east of Salonika fierce fighting raged Tuesday, a government spokesman said, and in several sectors the Germans "were not only repulsed but were dispersed."

A Greek government spokesman at 9 p. m. Tuesday had announced that Greek forces "violently threw back" massive assaults by German tanks, artillery and planes on the Ertuma Valley front and eastward along the Nevrokop Plateau.

The Germans, he said, attacked in waves "with great forces," but the Greeks held firm "with the greatest heroism."

Around Rupel Pass, bloody battleground of Germany's invasion just below the Greek-Bulgarian frontier, the Greeks were said at that time to have stood stubbornly in a chain of fortifications against the German assaults.

(In the face of this "unforeseen development," the Athens radio said, the Greeks "turn in this grave moment to salute our great ally and friend, the United States, and tell them that we look to the grim days ahead with resolution, faith and clear understanding of our duty.")

(The Greek radio heard in Budapest said that British land forces had invaded Bulgarian soil, presumably in the Struma Valley region.)

((German forces invading Yugoslavia from Rumania were said by the Italian radio to have captured the Yugoslav town of Tekia on the Danube opposite the Rumanian town of Orsovo and just west of the "Iron Gate," mountain passage to the Danube, after violent fighting.)

Fiume Evacuated

(Diplomats in Zurich reported that the Italians have completely evacuated Fiume at the top of the Adriatic on the frontier with Yugoslavia, following abandonment of the port of Zara, a tiny bit of Italian territory on the Yugoslav Dalmatian coast.)

A German mechanized column was said to have been wiped out by the cross-fire of hidden Greek mountain batteries in a rocky gorge as it attempted to drive through Nifea Pass near the already evacuated Greek town of Komotine in western Thrace, which has been abandoned by the Greeks for strategic reasons.

(Istanbul reports said that Komotine had fallen to the Germans after a bloody battle, cutting off communications between the Greeks and their potential Turkish allies. (Greek diplomatic quarters in Istanbul also reported that the Germans had established themselves on the Aegean seacoast at Alexandroupolis (Dede Agach) less than 70 miles from the Dardanelles, after the Greek abandonment of western Thrace.)

The Germans were reported to have suffered "great casualties" in Niefea Pass

Greeks Counterattack

"Not a single German escaped from the ravine, which was left strewn with German dead," a Greek military informant said.

Westward in the Struma Valley Greek shock troops were said to have launched a counterattack and captured a heavily fortified position which had been seized by the Germans earlier.

A force of 120 German parachute troops landed behind the Greek lines in Thrace was said to have been shattered with the capture of about 70 and the killing of 20 to 25, leaving only a handful at large. In the same sector, about 60 German infantrymen were reported captured

The British air force smashed at the German forces and Nazi lines of communications in the Balkans over a wide area, official communiques revealed, bombing the Bulgarian capital of Sofia in addition to Gornadjumaya, Simitli, Patrich and Strumica and machine-gunning troops, convoys and railroad stations.

One of the heaviest British terial bombardments was at Strumica on a spur railroad linking with the narrow-gauge road which runs through the Struma Valley.

capital, saying that it was "attacked ruthlessly by heavy planes, causing many innocent casualties and turning a great part of Belgrade into ruins."

"The modern Belgrade was the first victim of an unexpected and unprovoked attack, in the sense of national freedom and honor.

"On the ruins of Belgrade a greater and better capital of all southern Slavs is to be erected."

(The German radio heard in Zurich said that Belgrade had been "completely destroyed" along with other Yugoslav railroad centers.)

The Belgrade radio then broadcast a proclamation by 17-year-old King Peter II, saying that only a few hours earlier he had received from President Roosevelt a message promising "swift material assistance from the (United States) arsenal of democracy for the latest victims of German aggression."

The proclamation of King Peter, who assumed full royal powers after the recent anti-Axis army coup d'etat said:

"Serbs, Croats and Slovenes!

"Never even in your dreams did you intend injury to anything, and now you are forced to fight for your existence. The war that was raging around your country you endeavored to fend off because all that you . . . wanted was to live in peace, freedom and independence.

"After the enemy's ruthless attack it is clear that he wants the complete destruction of our nation. Just as in the past you have heroically defended your country, I am sure you will do the same now.

"Let us look calmly into the future and have faith in God and His righteousness. Let us take comfort from the unity of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, well aware of the fact that they do their duty united together.

"Forward to victory!"

Bern, Switzerland, April 8.—Pushing eastward up the Drina River from Scutari, Yugoslav mountain troops continue to harass the Italians in their retreat southward and southwestward from that town, which was captured yesterday, according to the second report received here from "somewhere in Yugoslavia" today.

Other forces attacking from the eastern frontier of Albania succeeded in capturing almost 100 prisoners in the neighborhood of Kukes, also on the Drina River.

Farther south, troops attacking from Strage and Bebar, just north of Lake Ochrida, advanced after heavy shelling and occupied "new positions." The exact location of other offensives or their extent is not divulged.

In northern Yugoslavia, such information as is available would indicate that the Yugoslav forces are still holding their own north of Novi Sad. Heavy bombing attacks by the Germans on lines of communication have inflicted much material damage on neighboring nonmilitary objectives, but would appear to have inflicted little damage on the Yugoslav lines.

The counting of the Italian material seized in Zara, near Fiume, yesterday continued today. It is reported to amount to considerably more than was at first expected. In the northwest, patrol activity and artillery duels continued but no mention was made of an advance on either side.

British Belittle Port of Salonika As Vulnerable to Air Attack

By the Associated Press

London, April 8.—British sources tonight belittled the value of Salonika, Grecian debarkation point of the Imperial Expeditionary Force in the Balkans, in a declaration which might indicate the British-Greek forces will make their main stand against the Nazis behind the Vardar River.

British military sources, admittedly in the dark as to Balkan strategy, conceded, however, that if Germany has captured Skoplje, Yugoslavia, "the situation in Yugoslavia might be unfavorable."

These sources said that if Skopjle, key to the Vardar Valley route, had fallen as the Nazis claimed, "any man's guess is as good as another's" as to Allied defense plans.

Speaking of Yugoslavia almost as a third party rather than an active ally in the European conflict, the British said initial German successes in Yugoslavia were possible because the Yugoslavs not only were outnumbered but were inadequately equipped and unable to provide themselves were effective air support.

The British said that while Yugoslav airports were about the best in the Balkans, they apparently were weakly defended against German bombing.

The situation was another illustration of a country maintaining neutrality to the end in the face of Nazi threats, they said, declaring the Yugoslavs had refused any British aid in advance of Nazi entry and that air fields couldn't be manned overnight.

Salonika, Aegean sea port at the mouth of the Vardar, was declared officially "no longer necessarily important to military operations" because of its vulnerability to air attack.

Women's League Backs Rent Bill

The Women's Trade Union League last night voted a resolution supporting a bill of Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, for a District rent commission to control rentals here.

The vote followed a speech at the meeting at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, by Seymour Howard, of the Coordinating Housing Committee of the District.

Howard asserted the housing situation is becoming increasingly grave here because of the influx of defense workers. Lanlords already are taking advantage of the situation to boost rentals, the speaker said.

spread as in the docks."

A squall of fire bombs left shipbuilding yards "completely outlined in red," it was said, and one returning pilot was quoted as saying the "only way to have put out the fires would have been to push the whole place into the sea."

"A mile square in the center of town," the account continued, "was a single sheet of fire . . . and in several areas our crews discovered it was not easy to find among the fires a vacant black spot on which to drop another bomb."

Fires started by the first waves were said to have guided subsequent bombers "like a beacon" from out to sea as far as Helgoland, about 100 miles distant.

While the admiralty announced British, Allied and neutral shipping losses for the week ended March 30 were 20 ships totaling 77,575 tons, relatively low, it had to revise figures sharply upward for the weeks ended March 2 and March 16.

The year's high, 150,700 tons, was reached for the week ended March 2, the admiralty's amended figures showed, and close behind was the 146,098 tons for the week ended March 16.

On the other side of the picture the admiralty said Britain had convoyed 200,000,000 gross tons of shipping since the war started and "the greater part of this vast tonnage arrived unmolested by the enemy."

Roosevelt Wants to Buy Danish Ships

miral Land said:

"There can be no question but that we all want to give the greatest and most effective assistance possible to the British, but we might well ask ourselves in our all-out aid to Britain if we could not give greater help by aiding the British to put out the fire rather than by concentrating most of our efforts on feeding it with fuel."

This concluding paragraph in his talk had grown out of an earlier one in which Admiral Land said:

"In considering the demand for ships and more ships, it seems to me we should stop to consider the cause for the demand. In the field of shipping aid to Britain, there is a huge bonfire burning—the submarine menace.

"If we base our shipping aid to Britain solely on supplying her with more and more ships, we are merely adding more fuel to the fire. Are there not a number of ways of solving this problem by attempting to put out the fire?"

President Roosevelt, it was disclosed at the State Department yesterday, sent a note to King Peter II in which he described Germany's invasion of Yugoslavia a "criminal assault." He expressed hope for a successful resistance and said "the United States will speedily furnish all material assistance possible in accordance with its existing statutes."

Asked at his press conference about American supplies for the embattled British, Greeks and Yugoslavs, President Roosevelt said they were being shipped as fast as they can get over there.

He said there was nothing new in the matter of taking the Red Sea out of the category of "combat area" under the Neutrality Act of 1939.

The President is expected to clear the way for American ships to travel through the Red Sea and possibly as far as the Suez Canal as soon as the British have cleaned up in Italian East Africa.

The prospect is that the Danish freighters will be used on this route. When the United States seized them recently, they were found to be shipshape and ready to sail.

In announcing he was about to ask Congress for legislation under which the ships could be purchased, President Roosevelt said he had talked with the Danish Minister Henrik de Kauffman, and that the diplomat had acquiesced in the sale.

Whether the ships will be sailed under the American flag or some foreign flag, such as the Panamanian, is a question, it is understood, which has not yet been settled.

President Roosevelt said that the seized German and Italian ships were in a different category. He said that these ships could be taken over by forfeiture. The ships were seized under the 1917 Espionage Act when it was found that the Italian and German crews were sabotaging many of them.

The President said that one method of taking over the Axis ships would be to exercise the right of eminent domain. But this, the President said, probably would involve a national emergency, although eminent legal authority had told him it could be done under the existing limited emergency.

The President emphasized, however, that this country had the right to take over the Axis ships through forfeiture. The 1917 Espionage Act provides for the forfeiture of foreign vessels sabotaged in United States ports in such a way that shipping is endangered. All but three of the Axis ships were sabotaged.

The new note of protest from Germany, the receipt of which was acknowledged yesterday by Secretary Hull, is said to have supplied supporting data on German claims that the United States had violated international law and a treaty of friendship and commerce between the two countries.

Secretary Hull last week flatly rejected both German and Italian protests.

Heavy Losses Admitted

Admiral Land's "put out the fire" speech came at a time when British authorities were making a melancholy admission in connection with the Battle of the Atlantic. They disclosed that during two of the last five weeks, German U-boats and bombers had destroyed 150,000 tons of shipping. What this weekly toll means might be judged from the fact that the 36 Danish ships in American ports have a combined tonnage of 220,000 tons.

"In connection with shipping aid to Britain," he said, "losses are now occurring at a rate close to 5,000,000 tons a year. It is obvious that, large as the British merchant marine was before the war, it cannot long withstand such losses, especially when millions of tons of its shipping have been necessarily diverted to essential military uses and millions more must be constantly under repair as a result of belligerent action.

"British merchant marine production before the war was around 1,500,000 tons a year and it is doubtful if, in spite of increased effort, war conditions in her shipyards have permitted of sufficient expansion to improve these figures greatly."

Bomb Shipbuilding Plants

Admiral Land said that the United States, when its program gets into full swing, would produce from 3,500,000 to 4,000,000 deadweight tons a year.

"This may be insufficient to meet the full extend of the British losses," he said, "but it is all that can be done effectively without serious changes in priorities."

"The best way to lick the submarine menace," he said, "is to get it at the source; that is, to bomb the enemy shipbuilding plants. The next best is probably to bomb the repair and rest stations where the submarines go when not at sea. Other ameliorating influences would be:

"1. A greater number of British combatant ships in the convoy.

"2. British combatant vessels convoying ships farther out on their outbound voyages.

"3. More British combatant ships meeting convoys at greater distances out on their incoming voyages.

"4. Use of convoys for slow ships only. Under present conditions fast merchant ships appear to have as good a chance if not better out of the convoy than in it.

"5. Destroy the communications between German aircraft and German submarines by destroying the German air patrol.

"6. Utilize an air patrol in the convoy."

At this point, Admiral Land in effect asked the American people whether they wanted to help put out the fire or just go on feeding it with fuel.

U. S. Will Fight if Rights Are Trampled, Wallace Says

By the United Press

New York, April 8.—Vice President Henry A. Wallace tonight warned agressor nations they must realize that "the American people are ready to go to war if their rights are transgressed at any vital point."

These rights include aiding the fighting democracies "to the limit with planes, ships, munitions and food" and maintaining the status quo of the Western Hemisphere, he said in a speech before the Foreign Policy Association.

In such a realization lies the "greatest likelihood" that the United States will remain at peace, he said.

Warning that "the Germans look on Latin America as their eventual happy hunting ground," he said, "we may be sure that as soon as they have the power they will so push us around politically and economically as to force us into war."

"With the situation as it is today," he added, "I believe the United States can stay out of war if the nations of the world know we are ready and willing to give all possible aid to the democracies."

He excoriated the Nezi regime, declared that a "Nazi victory and a Nazi peace are unthinkable" and predicted that Britain will win with American aid.

To avoid the "calamity" of a Nazi victory, he said, "we will help ourselves through helping England by all methods short of war."

Wallace said that "only defeatism on the psychological and economic front" in the United States can prevent a British victory.

"At the moment," he warned, "most of us in the United States are overconfident. We are not working hard enough. We do not realize that our very lives are at stake and that speed now may make the difference of millions of lives in this hemisphere."

In effect, he blamed the present state of world affairs on failure of the United States to accept "the responsibility which was offered to us" after the World War—on the policy of "isolationism (and) back-to-normalcy" adopted here after the conflict.

That mistake must not be repeated after this war, he said, broadly sketching United States peace aims.

"The United States now has her second opportunity to make the world safe for democracy," he added, cautioning that "peace will bring worldwide chaos unless the United States furnishes positive leadership."

"We of the United States can no more evade shouldering our responsibility than a boy of 18 can avoid becoming a man by wearing short pants. The word 'isolation' means short pants for a grown-up United States . . ." he said.

Observing that "the battle of peace will be more difficult to win than the battle of the war," Wallace said that unless the United States is prepared to help in the reorganization of a shattered world, "chaotic forces will leap from continent to continent and destroy even the United States."

Must Crush Nazi Ideology

This country's help, he said, must be of such a nature that:

1—". . . Neither a mad man nor a mad nation will ever again have the opportunity to kill millions of people and destroy tens of billions of dollars of property.

2—"The Nazi ideology with its belief in violence and deceit, its hatred of non-German races and its denial of the rights of man must be so crushed that it can never rise.

3—". . . Neither barbaric philosophy nor the militaristic imperialism of Prussia will ever again have the opportunity to find incarnation in the person of a leader possessed of devils in the Biblical sense."

Coventry Bears Brunt of Wide Night Air Raids

The raid was brief but intense, yet it fell short of the proportions of last November's crushing attack.

variety of proposals. Of this, $61,400 would finance the ever-increasing activities of the welfare and consumers interest committees of the District Defense Council, including $12,000 to pay the cost of transporting entertainers and "dancees" to nearby military camps for parties for the soldiers.

They also asked $15,000 for the Soldiers' and Sailors' Service Clubs and $10,000 for lodging equipment for soldiers on leave. A staff of six would be hired at a cost of $16,900, to push the work of the Defense Council committee, and $7,500 more was asked to promote the committee's general activities.

The Commissioners were asked by welfare officials to provide $72,420 to permit expansion of the child welfare, foster care and protective services. In support of this, welfare officials said "both juvenile and adult delinquencies probably will increase due to the overcrowded community, inadequate school and housing provisions, the coming and going of transients and the stresses and strains of the national emergency."

The Police Department asked for an additional $123,063 for salaries for extra policemen, which officials said would cover the employment of 100 extra men, and also asked for $15,300 for additional clerk hire. For the long-proposed new police station house, at Forty-second Street and Benning Road Northeast, police officials sought $36,500. They also asked funds for additional motor vehicles, uniforms, fuel and contingencies.

Fire Department officials requested $74,940 for extra personnel, and this was said to cover 35 extra men and 3 more officers. The department also asked $98,000 for provision of a new fire engine house, No. 14 Engine Company, at North Capitol and Crittenden Streets. Among other items the department sought $60,750 for replacement of fire-fighting apparatus.

average monthly expenditures during the last six months of 1940 for aircraft, ships and ordnance were about $116,000,000, while the average monthly disbursement for these categories in the first quarter of this year was $197,000,000.

During the whole of 1940, he added, expenditures for new plant facilities were only $45,000,000, as compared with $240,000,000 in only three months of 1941.

These figures do not include orders and deliveries for the British, the President stated.

Repeating that progress was still too slow, the President declined to offer the reasons which he believed were responsible, except to say that there were thousands of them. The major factor for the slowness, he finally admitted, was human beings. He declined to expand.

Asked what steps he recommended for speeding up the program, the Chief Executive smiled broadly and said he thought he would just keep on using chestnut burrs, explaining that this was a reference to the rustic practice of applying the prickly goads to the sides of mules to speed them up.

Questioned on whether he agreed with testimony Monday of OPM Production Chief John D. Biggers that production during the next 100 days would be critical for the defense of the Nation, Mr. Roosevelt indicated assent but added that the same was true of the following 100 days and possibly the 100 days after that, although he could not see that far ahead.

Asked for comment on recent recommendations to Congress by defense chiefs for compulsory "cooling off" period legislation in the interest of speeding production by preventing strikes, the President said he thought the situation was working in that general direction and that he was looking forward to results. It was not clear whether his comment indicated his support to this type of legislation, which Administration labor officials and other New Dealers have hitherto strongly opposed, or whether a voluntary agreement on "cooling off" periods was developing of itself.

Reminded that a delegation of five State Governors is to see him today on decentralization of defense industries, Mr. Roosevelt said the defense program must not be regarded as proceeding on the basis of dollar and cents benefits to each and every State in the Union.

Defense planners are seeking continually to decentralize industry, he added, and the program is working out reasonably well, in accordance with the dictates of efficiency.

fort to recover the bodies of other victims. The wreckage recovered was placed under immediate inspection by naval authorities who were striving for clews to determine cause of the crash.

A report that one floating life raft was found inflated led to speculation that not all the men were instantly killed.

Officers of a Coast Guard power boat that had sped to the scene of the tragedy reported the plane's fuselage, perhaps ripped apart by the impact and, presumably bearing bodies of victims, had sunk below the water's surface.

Picked up were a pair of trousers and a pair of shoes, a life raft, two landing wheels and a mattress.

Jewish Soldiers of 29th Division Invited to Passover Festival

Fort George G. Meade, Md., April 8 (AP).—The Hillel Foundation at the University of Maryland has invited Jewish members of the Twenty-ninth Division to College Park tomorrow night to attend a Passover Seder celebration.

The soldiers have been asked to join with Jewish students in the ceremonies, which will be conducted by Rabbi Samuel M. Silver.

Meanwhile special Easter religious services will be held Sunday for the entire personnel of Fort Meade, their relatives and friends and citizens from nearby communities.

The services, which will take place on the parade ground west of Twenty-ninth Division headquarters, will begin at 9:30 a. m. If the weather does not permit outdoor services, they will be held at Division Motion Picture Theater No. 3, Chamberlain and Seventh Streets.

Services will be under the auspices of the nine Protestant chaplains of the division. Lieut. Col. Frederick C. Reynolds, former pastor of Grace Methodist Church, Baltimore, is division chaplain.

The Right Rev. Adna W. Leonard, Bishop of the Methodist Church, Washington, D. C., will preach the sermon and the choir of St. Philip's Episcopal Church, Laurel, Md., will furnish special music.

A massed band from the division, directed by Warrant Officer Meyer Goldman, will play a sacred concert starting at 9 o'clock.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general of the Twenty-ninth Division, has asked that every member who is in camp Sunday morning attend the service.

After the band concert there will be a massing of the colors, with a color guard from each regiment present, and a processional in which all commanding officers have been asked to participate.

6 Men Charged With Robberies Held in Jail

Six men charged with armed robberies were at the District Jail last night in default of bonds totaling $125,000.

Constituting two separate gangs, according to police, the men were arraigned before Police Court Judge John P. McMahon yesterday.

The first defendants, Richard K. Oliver, 21, of 1341 L Street Northwest, and Bernard W. Rhine, 23, of Baltimore, were accused of robbing Joseph Weiner at 7329 Georgia Avenue Northwest, of $60 March 10. Both were held to the grand jury under $25,000 bond each.

To others said to have been associates of Oliver and Rhine, Frank J. Kane, 21, of 1415 Ames Place Northeast, and Theophil Tiverney, 27, of the 400 block Eleventh Street Southeast, were held under similar bonds charged with the $275 holdup of a drug store at 6101 Dix Street Northeast, March 16.

Oliver also was charged with the latter offense and was ordered to post an additional $5,000 bail in this case.

Two other defendants, Richard Sheehan, 28, no fixed address, and Earl Sweeney, 21 of 107 E Street Southeast, were remanded to jail in default of $10,000 each. They were accused of a $60 holdup at 1619 L Street Northwest, January 14.

Crash Stills 'Lone Ranger's' Voice

Earle W. Graser Killed as Car Hits Truck-Trailer

By the Associated Press

Farmington, Mich., April 8.—The voice of the "Lone Ranger," a hero to countless thousands of radio listeners, was stilled today by the very hazard he sought to curb—highway traffic.

Earl W. Graser, 32, was killed in front of the Farmington Methodist Church in suburban Detroit when his automobile hurtled out of control into the rear of a parked trailer. The accident occurred at 5 a. m. For months, Graser in personal messages to the "friends of the Lone Ranger" had used his program and his voice to promote traffic safety.

But although his well known voice is gone, the "Lone Ranger" will continue to ride and "Hi, Yo Silver, Away!" will still be heard. WXYZ of Detroit, key of the 140 station network which broadcasts the program, announced shortly after Graser's death that Brace Beemer, the original voice of the "Lone Ranger" for a few months at the program's start nearly 10 years ago, would resume his old role. Beemer is now the narrator for the program.

In contrast to his adventures on the air, Graser in private life was quiet and studious—even standoffish, his neighbors said. He lived

Graser had played the role of

Hillman Opposes Antistrike Legislation, Denies Communists Control Labor

'Not Fair' to Imply Red Domination, Says Associate in OPM

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Associate Director Sidney Hillman of the OPM declared yesterday that it was not helpful to the national defense to assert that Communists are in conrol "every time a strike breaks out."

Hillman emphatically told House investigators of the defense program that he was reliably informed the Ford strike was not Communist inspired, and added that it was "not fair" to imply Red domination of American labor.

The codirector of OPM, who testified before the Military Affairs Committee for three and a half hours, declared that jurisdictional strikes in national defense industries were "not justified," but he reiterated his opposition to legislation on the "vital subject of employer-employe relations."

William H. Davis, of the National Mediation Board, who headed the panel that settled the Allis-Chalmers strike, likewise testified that legislation was not needed at the present time. But he suggested that the Army and Navy might "very easily" require all firms with which they do business to provide for a "cooling-off" period in collective bargaining agreements.

Hillman's observations on the lack of Communist influence in defense strikes were provoked by questions of Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, a member of the Dies Committee as well as of the Military Affairs Committee.

In reply to Thomas' direct query, Hillman asserted with force that "I not only have not been a member of the Communist Party but I have been opposed to its philosophy, practices and policies since its organization." He added that he had never belonged to any "front" organization either.

After more questioning along this line, Representative Thomas revealed that Dies Committee investigators had privately reported the existence of a letter from Lee Pressman, C. I. O. general counsel, showing that the C. I. O. "is planning a general strike."

The letter, said Thomas, asks the membership of a C. I. O. affiliate what its attitude would be if a general strike crippling national defense industries were called to protest the deportation of Harry Bridges West Coast labor leader, now engaged in a Federal hearing to determine whether he should be expelled from the country. Thomas said a similar letter had been discovered from Joseph Curran, National Maritime Union head.

The Republican Representative added that he did not know if the letters were authentic, but he asked Hillman "what he knows about them."

The witness replied that he had never heard of the letters and, furthermore, he did not believe that Philip Murray, C. I. O. head, "would for one moment" tolerate such a strike.

C. I. O. headquarters subsequently announced that Pressman declared at Pittsburgh, Pa., that the general strike allegation was "an absolute falsehood and I challenge anyone to produce such a letter."

Reading from the Dies Committee report, as yet unpublished, Representative Thomas said that the Communist Party had "successfully penetrated" the United Automobile Workers Union (which has called the Ford strike) and that the U. A. W. had not attempted to rid itself of Communists.

Hillman declared that he had made "every effort" to ascertain the real leadership of the Ford strike; that he had been positively informed by his aide on the scene that it was not Communist; that he himself had known U. A. W. President R. J. Thomas for years and knew he was not a Communist, and that "I don't believe it's helping the national defense to imply that tens of thousands of workers on strike are under the leadership of subversive elements."

Hillman assured the committee that the Allis-Chalmers strike was the only stoppage that seriously affected the defense program. "Never in my experience," he said, "has there been so much cooperation between labor and management as right now."

Davis, New York patent attorney and former chairman of the State mediation board, told the committee yesterday that in the Allis-Chalmers strike, "both sides were about as much at fault as people could be." He indicated to the committee that the mediation panel had "read the riot act" to both sides, and that "public opinion was right with us in that room."

The nearest Davis came to approving legislation was when he said Congress might pass a resolution expressing the opinion that all defense industries should have employer-employe bargaining contracts providing for no strikes during the life of the agreement and for a 30-day waiting period at the termination of the contract.

C. I. O. President Attends Ford Strike Parley

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 8.—A dramatic announcement that sudden developments today toward settlement of the Ford Motor Co. strike were "encouraging to all parties" was made following a surprise visit by the highest officer of the C. I. O. for an unprecedented meeting with company officials.

Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner made the statement amid indications that concerted efforts were being made, here and in Washington, to reach a quick solution of the labor dispute.

The Governor disclosed that he had made an urgent request to President Roosevelt not to approve certification of the strike to the Defense Mediation Board "until I have talked with you."

Later, in Washington, Secretary of Labor Perkins sent word to Van Wagoner that she would comply with his request and not turn over the Ford dispute to the mediation board at this time.

Asked whether Miss Perkins had given conciliators 24 hours to settle the strike, Van Wagoner said she had set a time limit of "24 or 48 hours—I'm not sure."

A face-to-face conference between Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and Harry H. Bennett, company personnel director and confidant of Henry Ford on labor matters, started the day's surprise moves.

Also present at the parley, which began at 10:30 a. m. and ended at 2:30 p. m., were the Governor, James F. Dewey, Federal conciliator; L. A. Capizzi, company attorney, and other unidentified officials of the firm.

Another joint conference between company spokesmen and union officials was arranged for tonight, the Governor said.

Murray arrived here unheralded, after President Roosevelt canceled an appointment with him in Washington, and departed late in the afternoon left for the Capital, declining to add any comment to the Governor's statement.

Informed sources said, however, that before leaving Murray had given the Governor and Dewey a list of "irreducible demands" of the union and had left complete instructions with R. J. Thomas, U. A. W. president, on future moves.

It was learned also that the union expected a decision within 24 hours as to whether "we will have a protracted strike or whether there will be a settlement reached."

The Governor and Dewey, it was understood, were prepared to present the union's demands to Ford officials and to consult with union leaders as soon as the company's reply is given.

It was the first time in the Ford firm's 38 year history that a union official has negotiated directly regarding contractual relations governing wages and working conditions with officials of the company, the last nonunion stronghold of the automobile industry.

Roosevelt Takes Stand Against Censoring News

President Roosevelt yesterday indicated he was averse to any Government censorship.

Secretary of the Navy Knox has taken the position that newspapers should refrain from carrying stories on the location or movements of United States naval vessels, or on the presence of any British warships in this country. He held that the information would be of value to other countries.

The President noted that some newspapers had published editorials explaining why they had failed to comply with Knox's request. These editorials, he said, were the lamest excuse to get right with the reading public that he had ever read.

He added he had noticed that some papers had advocated the clamping down of legal censorship. Then, authorizing a direct quotation, the President declared:

"I much prefer to go along with the overwhelming majority of the newspapers" (in imposing a voluntary censorship).

Serbs in Albania Rout Italians

London (Wednesday), April 9 (U.P.) Yugoslav forces, in a two-pronged invasion from the north, were reported from Ankara early today to have driven 30 miles inside Albania, routing Italian forces and capturing the town of Ljes (Lesh).

Stockholders Protest Policy Of Bethlehem

The Bethlehem Steel Co.'s labor policy yesterday brought down the ire of the National Labor Relations Board and some of its own stockholders upon its president, Eugene G. Grace.

The board requested the First Circuit Court of Appeals at Boston to hold the company in contempt of court for failure to abide by the court's order of six months ago to end company domination of employe organizations at the Boston and Fore River shipbuilding yards.

The board's petition for an order to show cause why the company should not be judged in contempt included Grace and several other officers of the corporation.

The petition pointed out that on February 10, 1939, the board ordered withdrawal of recognition from the Employes Representation Plan, a sister organization to the "ERP's" which were the issues of strikes last month at the company's home plant at Bethlehem, Pa., and at Johnstown, Pa.

The board's order was enforced in full by the Circuit Court of Appeals, but the board claims that a week after the Circuit Court decision, the officers of the ERP reorganized it under the name of the Independent Union of Fore River Workers, which was largely officered by former ERP officials, and was recognized by the company, even though "Bethlehem at all times has well known or had reason to believe that the Independent, by virtue of being the same as or successor to the Plan . . . was not entitled to recognition."

Criticism from within the company's own family took place yesterday at Wilmington, Del., where three security holders rose to protest the company's labor policy at its annual stockholders meeting.

One of the protestants was Miss Zara duPont, of Cambridge, Mass., 72-year-old member of the millionaire Delaware family.

"Not a single bar of steel or a single ship can be turned out by the company without the cooperation of labor," said Miss duPont, who years ago was a leading figure in the women's suffrage fight and who recently has taken labor's part in various disputes.

"Bethlehem's present policies are calculated utterly to destroy labor's faith in the devotion of America's industrial leaders to democracy," she said, adding that the company's policies are "exceedingly costly to the stockholders."

Grace replied that the company was willing to meet with a bargaining agency when such an agency is set up.

"There's an orderly way to establish the official legal bargaining agency. Let the due process of law be followed out and I suspect you'll get your bargaining agency," he declared.

(The National Labor Relations Board ordered Monday that a collective bargaining election be held at the company's Lackawanna, N. Y., plant, scene of a strike on this issue in February. Officials of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organization Committee have also indicated that they will ask soon for similar elections at the Bethlehem and Johnstown mills.)

U. S. Officials Mourn Death Of Christie, Canadian Diplomat

Hull Pays Tribute; Funeral to Be Held in Arlington

Official Washington last night mourned the death in New York yesterday of Loring Christie, former Canadian Minister to the United States, called by members of the Diplomatic Corps "a great public servant" who had an "intuitive understanding of the United States."

The Canadian Legation announced that private services will be held for Mr. Christie at the receiving vault in Arlington National Cemetery at noon today. The body will be placed there temporarily pending final plans for interment.

The 55-year-old Minister who served here from September, 1939, until stricken with a cardiac condition several months ago, yesterday was praised by Secretary Hull as a "distinguished statesman and loyal servant of Canada whose death will be a distinct loss to his government . . . as well as his many friends and colleagues in the United States."

Career Lauded

"His long residence in the United States from the time he attdended Harvard University, during his years with the United States Department of Justice, his presence at the Washington Arms Conference, and finally his assignment as Minister of Canada, gave him a deep appreciation and understanding of the problems confronting our two countries," Hull said.

Mr. Christie, who last November was married to Miss Marian Conway Trumbull, of Washington, in the Canadian Legation, had previously served here as an attorney with the Justice Department from 1910 to 1913.

Leighton McCarthy, who has been acting Canadian Minister since Mr. Christie's illness, last night issued the following statement:

"Mr. Christie's death has come as a great shock to the legation. He arrived in Washington shortly after the outbreak of war to take up his post as Canadian Minister. He gained immediately the affection and respect of every member of the legation. It is tragic that his brilliant career has been cut short by his untimely death.

LORING CHRISTIE

Sympathy to Family

"The legation has extended its deepest sympathy to Mrs. Christie and to his son, Mr. Paul Christie, and to other members of his family."

In 1913 Mr. Christie was appointed, at the age of 28, to the post of legal adviser to the department of external affairs in Canada and attended the London war conferences in 1917 and 1918.

He attended the Paris Peace Conference and the International Labor Conference in Washington in 1919, and was on the Canadian delegation to the First Assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva in 1920.

Mr. Christie was associated with a London banking firm from 1923 to 1926; from 1927 to 1929 he was special assistant to the chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, and from 1929 to 1935 he was legal officer and secretary-treasurer of a power company in Montreal.

In 1935, he returned to the department of external affairs as counsellor, where he remained until appointed Canadian Minister to this country. In 1915 he married the late Marie Armstrong, of Ottawa. They had one son, Paul.

Mr. Christie died at Rockefeller Hospital. Funeral arrangements will be announced today.

Norfolk Area Elects Harris To Congress

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., April 8.—Winder R. Harris, managing editor of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, was elected to Congress from the Second District today to succeed Representative Colgate W. Darden (Democrat), of Virginia, resigned.

Norman R. Hamilton, publisher of the Portsmouth Star and former Representative, conceded the election and telegraphed congratulations and a promise of cooperation to Harris.

With 132 of the district's 133 precincts tabulated, the Associated Press returns showed 13,168 votes for Harris, to 8,923 for Hamilton. Harris was leading in every county and city reporting except Hamilton's home town of Portsmouth, where Hamilton led by more than 2 to 1.

Both Backed Roosevelt

Harris was nominated February 28 by a Democratic convention which Hamilton, who refused to let his name go before it, asserted was controlled by the State Democratic organization headed by Senator Harry F. Byrd. Hamilton, who urged a primary, said he would run as an independent Democrat if no primary was held.

Both men stanchly backed the Roosevelt foreign and national defense policies.

The vote in the district was exceptionally light and only a handful of votes went to Maurice McCarty, labor leader, and A. J. Dunning, jr., prohibitionist running on an antiwar platform. The 132 precincts gave McCarty 364 and Dunning 74.

Darden resigned from Congress to enter the August primary as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Virginia.

Harris worked on newspapers in Richmond and Newport News, and engaged in newspaper work in Washington before becoming managing editor of the Virginian-Pilot in August, 1925.

Alabama Runoff Looms

Jasper, Ala., April 8 (AP).—Carter Manasco, of Jasper, secretary to the late Speaker William B. Bankhead, took a slight lead tonight in a special Democratic primary to nominate a Seventh Congressional District Representative.

The post was held for two decades by Speaker Bankhead.

Manasco, 5,206; Still Hunter, of Jasper, 4,372; Burgess Mahan, Russellville mayor, 4,362; Dr. R. L. Hill, Winfield, 2,644; Charles Wiggins, Jasper, 2,084; J. R. White, Walker County, 495.

Manasco and Hunter or Mahan apparently will enter a second primary to determine the nominee.

Steelman Reports 'Substantial Agreement' in Coal Discussion

By International News Service

New York, April 8.—The joint Appalachian soft coal wage conference adjourned again tonight at 6 o'clock, with no agreement on a new contract reached between operators and officials of the United Mine Workers. However, Federal Conciliator John R. Steelman announced that the conference would reconvene tomorrow morning and that "a substantial agreement has been reached between some of the parties."

It was not indicated whether anything substantial has been done to heal the fast-widening breech between Northern and Southern mine operators. Ezra van Horn, spokesman for the Northern operators, refused to comment.

"We are still negotiating a wage contract," he said.

Of paramount interest to the public, however, was a decision reached to discuss with the Bituminous Coal Commission the question of adjusting prices to meet any increased cost incurred by the operators in granting wage increases.

Steelman Cautious

Steelman would not say whether this forecast a raise in the price of coal to the consumer.

"That is a matter for the Bituminous Coal Commission," he said.

"I can tell you that a substantial agreement has been reached between some of the parties," Steelman said after the conference adjourned. "We are trying desperately to effectuate a complete accord to stabilize this backbone industry for a period of two years . . .

"Some of the operators have agreed to resume production on the retroactive proposal at any time we (the Government) request it. Due to the irregularity of the industry and to the fact that for a few days there is no danger of a coal shortage, it is with my approval that the negotiators delay in bringing this matter to a vote until some further time for consideration."

Insist on Differential

The Southern mine operators, meantime, issued a statement denying that they were obstructing or delaying a settlement. They are ready to grant wage increases, they said, but insist on maintaining the 40-cents a day wage differential between the Northern and Southern fields.

Today also marked the first meeting of the hard-coal operators of the rich anthracite field. These operators opened their conference with the United Mine Workers by turning down wage increases asked for by the miners and recommending that the present two-year contract be extended for another two years "with only slight modifications."

The mine owners held that a cost increase would "gravely imperil" present markets and employment, since "anthracite is a domestic fuel which does not respond readily to rising prices and is not materially affected by war demands."

The hard-coal operators also proposed that should they be unable to reach an agreement before the expiration of their present contract on April 30, work should continue in the mines pending conclusion of a new contract. They said, nothing about making any wage increases retroactive to that date.

British Minister Will Be D. A. R.'s Opening Speaker

An historic moment in the tradition of the Daughters of the American Revolution will take place, when an Englishman, Nevile M. Butler, Minister to the United States, will make the principal address at the opening session of the Fiftieth Continental Congress Monday evening in Constitution Hall.

His address on "The Price of Liberty," might "well be termed the keynote speech of the Congress, "according to an announcement from D. A. R. headquarters yesterday.

With the traditions of the American Revolution no less vivid in this anniversary year, the sessions will bring emphasis on problems of National defense. Preceding the opening session Monday night, the National Defense Symposium will be held that afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel, under chairmanship of Mrs. Imogen B. Emery of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Make your Power as you need it

THE only way to get power out of an engine is to burn fuel in it.

And it wouldn't be smart to burn enough gas to develop a hundred-plus horsepower all of the time—when it usually takes only a small part of that to give the performance you want.

The sensible thing to do is to develop power as you need it—and that is precisely what the Buick FIREBALL eight with Compound Carburetion† does.

As long as one of the two carburetors in this system will do the job, that is the only one that functions.

But when you need extra power, extra pressure on the foot throttle throws an extra carburetor into action, feeding more fuel mixture into your engine and pouring more horsepower out.

You thus make your power as you need it.

You know the lift and life of plenty-power when it's wanted.

You have a smooth-working, purring, never-overloaded engine at all times and all paces.

Stokowski's Finale Rich In Artistry

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Leopold Stokowski conducts the Philapelphia Orchestra and the Westminster Choir in music from Johann Sebastian Bach's "The Passion of Our Lord According to St. Matthew" on Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Soloists: LoRéan Hodapp, soprano; Elizabeth Krueger, contralto; Harold Hedgpeth, tenor; John Baumgartner, basso; George Krueger, basso; Henri Switten, cembalo; Georges Couvreur, organ.

Making his last official appearance here as conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, Leopold Stokowski took leave of a capacity audience in Constitution Hall last evening by directing his cherished organization and the Westminster Choir in a condensed version of Bach's "The Passion of Our Lord According to St. Matthew." By judicious selection of the more important parts of the great composition, the performance was accomplished in a little more than two hours, including the intermission between the two parts. Despite the printed request on the program that there be no applause, the audience, deeply moved by the impressive presentation, did not refrain from expressing appreciation both at the major pause and at the end, although there was no customary clamor for the recall of the conductor.

BROWN

No matter how many times Mr. Stokowski may direct concerts here in the future, the farewell which marked his severance of relations with the orchestra will be long remembered not only because of the nobility of the music but also because his authoritative artistry on the podium was at the peak. His reading of the music had dignity and reverence and conveyed so profound a sympathy that his skill seemed subservient to the interpretation.

Rising to the occasion, the Westminster Choir did the best singing that one has heard from its ranks for several seasons. In precision of attack and in tonal shadings there was an excellent coordination, and the double choruses were well balanced. The soloists were sincere and expressive in their parts, although not always filling the demands of tessitura and amplitude of tone.

Encomia of the "Matthew Passion" have been so numerous that additional comments are only echoes. It stands as the complete expression of Bach's genius, whether one regards it from the religious or the dramatic point of view. Its solemnity rise from his personal piety, its strength from his unshakeable convictions, its romanticism from his poetic vision, and its warmth from his rich humanity.

The flowering of romanticism is foretold in many of the instrumental devices, such as the mourning oboe solo which precedes and accompanies the tenor utterance of "I would beside my Lord be watching" and in the violin solo which weaves above and about the alto voicing of "Have mercy, Lord, on me; regard my bitter weeping." Passages like these have a searching quality which touches the emotional springs. And the concluding chorus, "Here yet awhile, Lord, Thou art sleeping," has a power of consolation and a glow of hope that have never been surpassed.

Creator of Mary Poppins Sees Worse to Come in England

A bright-eyed curly-haired Englishwoman—creator of Mary Poppins, a favorite storybook character of numerous English and American children—yesterday on her first visit to Washington emulated Mary herself in the agility with which her conversation slipped from stern realism to a lighter poetic mood.

Insisting that she be called P. L. Travers (no first name, please), for her books are signed that way, the author perched on a couch in the apartment of Miss Lesley Frost, 1735 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, and talked first of her native land.

"Physically there's probably a great deal worse to come in England," she declared. "But morally we've already won."

Her two books, "Mary Poppins" and "Mary Poppins Comes Back," lay in their bright-colored jackets on the couch beside her. Although, she pointed out, the books are fairy tales in a sense, "really it's the whole business of life—the way a person can slip from the common to the magical and back again, and can simultaneously live in both worlds." Nearly 300,000 copies of the books have been sold since the first one appeared in 1934.

Having spent the winter in New York where she plans to be "for the duration," Miss Travers expressed delight that she had met spring in Washington. She hopes to meet Vice President Wallace, too, because her great friend, the Irish Poet, "A. E." (the late George Russell) was also a friend of Mr. Wallace's, she said. She is visiting in a literary atmosphere here, for her hostess is the daughter of the poet, Robert Frost, and is herself a writer.

Miss Travers has a new book, "I Go By Sea, I Go By Land," coming out in May (a story about a journey from England to America), and Mary Poppins is being dramatized for a play to appear in the fall.

Hitler's Order to His Troops Showed Fear, Says Dr. Walsh

The language of his order sending troops into Yugoslavia and Greece "reveals the first stirrings of latent fear on the part of Herr Hitler," Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., of Catholic University, declared last night.

"Its abusive tone," the vice president of Georgetown and regent of its foreign school told his weekly lecture audience in Memorial Continental Hall, "its reliance on vituperative epithets such as 'ruffians,' 'criminal usurpers,' 'legions of capitalism and plutocracy,' is in the style of Lenin, Trotsky and Stalin.

"Doubtless he is chagrined to find himself engaged in an unexpected warfare on another front, to his serious disadvantage in the west.

"And so he vents his spleen on the upstarts who prefer imminent death in Belgrade and Athens rather than surrender their independence to the world concept of Berlin."

Father Walsh also remarked on the "mystery" of Hitler's failure to attack England immediately following the retreat from Dunkirk, when the island's defenses had "nothing like their present powers of resistance."

Instead, Hitler invaded The Lowlands and France, Father Walsh said, adding:

"Although historical analogies are not conclusive, students of the Napolenonic Wars will remember that Napoleon's fatal mistake was his decision to turn eastward and invade Russia." This, he said, after Napoleon's armies "had waited for a year in the hope of a favorable moment to invade England."

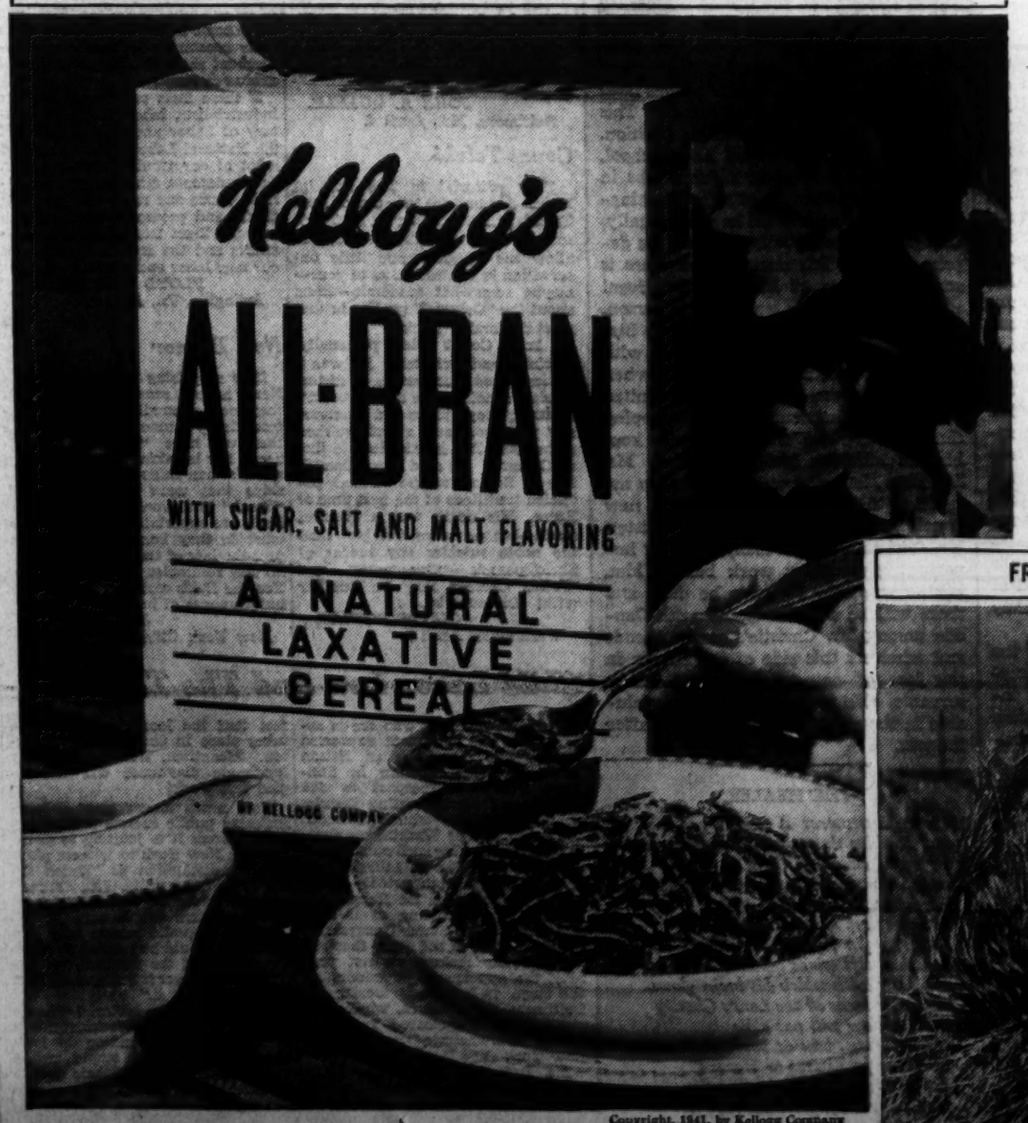
NOW DOUBLY DELICIOUS! GOLDEN SOFT KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN! IT'S MADE FROM ONE OF THE WORLD'S FINEST WHEATS!

IT'S LIGHTER! CRISPER! TRY IT FOR TOMORROW'S BREAKFAST



Copyright, 1941, by Kellogg Company

FOR YEARS you've known KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN as a famous laxative cereal. Now try it for its taste as well!

IT'S DOUBLY DELICIOUS because it's made of finer quality bran from one of the world's softest wheats. The improved ALL-BRAN comes out of our toasters bright as shreds of gold. It's lighter! Crisper! More delicate! Be sure to ask your grocer for it today.

Making a good thing better is an old American custom. So, for years Kellogg's grain buyers, who buy more grain for ready-to-eat breakfast cereals than any other men in the world, have been seeking an ideal wheat for KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. A few months ago, they found it growing in the sunny valleys of the Pacific Coast states and in a few midwestern and eastern areas.

It's one of the world's softest wheats—used for the finest pastry flour.

The bran from this wheat, put through ALL-BRAN'S cooking and toasting ovens, came out bright as shreds of gold, and lighter, softer, crisper, more delicately flavored than any we had used in 20 years of making ALL-BRAN.

And now the improved and more delicious ALL-BRAN is at your grocer's.

If you or other members of your family are troubled with constipation due to lack of the right kind of "bulk" in the diet, try the improved ALL-BRAN! Or use it merely as a precaution against this common ailment. Be sure to eat it regularly, and drink plenty of water.

ALL-BRAN is made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. It is sold by grocers and served by restaurants everywhere.

FROM ONE OF THE WORLD'S FINEST WHEATS

OUT IN THE WEST, grain men are growing one of the world's softest wheats. It is used especially for the finest pastry flour. And it's from this marvelous wheat that Kellogg's gets its better bran for your favorite breakfast food.

Reason Of Unreason

We have it from the distinguished Senor Ortega y Gasset that Western mankind is now beginning to lose its faith in physico-mathematical science as an infallible guide to truth, just as it had previously relaxed its faith in revealed religion. This is a very interesting thesis, and Senor Ortega promises to work it out in greater detail in another book. Meanwhile let us look around and see what evidence we can find on our own hook.

One of the symptoms seems to be a great boom in what are commonly considered superstitions—witchcraft, magic, soothsaying, astrology and so on. Something of the same sort seems to have occurred in the ancient world after the decline of the great classical religions. Likewise the period of transition from the Middle Ages to what we call the modern world—or, roughly, the period from 1450 to 1650—was also remarkable for the revival not merely of ancient learning, but also of ancient superstitution, both among the lowly and ignorant and among the educated, the talented and the influential. Among devout believers in witchcraft, for example, were the artist Cellini, the physician Sir Thomas Browne and James I of England.

Well, here in Washington, it seems, we have one enthusiastic group whose contribution to the National Defense and the cause of civilization is the sticking of pins into dolls painted to resemble Herr Hitler, meanwhile muttering the appropriate incantations. One of the current best sellers in our local bookstores is a translation of the recently resurrected Oracles of Michel de Notredame (or Nostradamus). Into Michel's strange and glittering ambiguities we are busily reading the history of the past 400 years. This book in fact has replaced Mein Kampf as the infallible authority on what is going to happen next. Indeed, it is said that a copy of a much earlier translation in the rare book collection of the Library of Congress has suffered so much from daily demands for it that it has been necessary to rebind the volume in a stout new cover.

Meanwhile, the astronomers are becoming a bit perturbed, and perhaps a little indignant, at the tremendous court now being paid to their long disowned stepchild, astrology. In the past ten years the casting of horoscopes has become a flourishing industry, especially, it is said, in Hollywood and Wall Street. What people want to know nowadays is not what the nebulae are made of, or how many million light years would be required for a return trip to Betelgeuse, but whether the stars are bullish or bearish on Allied Chemical and American Can or what the stars say about the probabilities of a marriage proposal.

However, the inquirer at these shrines gets scant comfort from science. In a recent article in the Scientific Monthly Prof. Bart J. Bok and Mrs. Margaret W. Mayall, of the Harvard Observatory, are at great pains to point out that no physico-mathematical evidence exists for believing that the conjunction of planets can have any influence on the stock market, or on movie contracts, or love affairs, or on human concerns in general. But after a survey of the history of the subject they, too, admit that astrology flourishes "in periods of high scientific development rather than low periods, and also in periods when religion and philosophy are in eclipse." Perhaps, though, we may be in a sort of confused birth pangs of a revival of those ancient faiths which preceded the age of science.

American Contrast

On the very day that Hitler launched his barbarous attack on Yugoslavia and Greece, the foreign ministers of Colombia and Venezuela came together, and signed a treaty ending a century-old boundary dispute between the two countries. The action was a manifestation of the spirit of peace and good neighborliness prevailing in this hemisphere. Boundary disputes can have very tragic consequences. That has been proved on this side of the Atlantic as well as across the seas. But here in the Americas, the nations have learned to settle their differences by peaceful means. Venezuela and Colombia have given evidence of this by Saturday's pact. President Santos of Colombia was entirely justified in declaring that the treaty "contributes as a definite and powerful guarantee in the American consciences of the purpose of resolving conflicts through conciliation and accord." And Gen. Lopez Contreras, the Venezuelan Chief Executive, had reason to take pride in the contrast between what his nation and its neighbor had done with what was happening in many places overseas.

Curious Immunity

Since the Supreme Court handed down its opinion in the Hutcheson case two months ago, labor unions have made extensive use of their privilege of striking to crush rival organizations. For that reason it was hoped that the sweeping implications of the decision might be modified in some respects when cases involving more flagrant restraints upon interstate commerce reached the Supreme Court. The rulings handed down by that body on Monday, however, appear to extend the immunity of unions from antitrust prosecution, and to leave the Department of Justice without a weapon to employ against monopolistic labor practices.

In the Hutcheson case the court held that restraint of trade resulting from disputes between unions is not among the practices banned by the Sherman Act. Now that doctrine has been extended in a way which seriously undercuts the National Labor Relations Act. The so-called Plywood case grew out of a dispute between two local unions, one representing the C. I. O. and the other the A. F. of L. Both agreed to abide by the results of an NLRB election to determine which union should be certified as collective bargaining representative. But when employes showed their preference for the C. I. O. union, the A. F. of L. local attempted to prevent recognition of its rival by threatening to strike. It was for this alleged conspiracy that the union was indicted. But the Supreme Court has now affirmed a lower court decision dismissing the indictment. A similar set of circumstances in the case of the Building Trades Council of New Orleans brought a similar decision.

Employers are thus put on notice that they have no protection against destruction of their business by unions defeated in an NLRB election. The Government insists that employers bargain collectively with unions certified by the NLRB, but under these decisions, it can offer those employers no protection against coercive action by groups which flout the spirit of the Labor Relations Act. The Department of Justice appears to have suffered a sweeping defeat of its efforts to prevent unions from exploiting consumers and tying up interstate commerce to crush other labor organizations. If only for the sake of preventing wholesale disregard of NLRB orders, this curious contradiction in the law as interpreted by the Supreme Court should be speedily set straight.

The effect of the latest decisions, which were handed down in the form of orders with no written opinions and without even giving the Department of Justice an opportunity to present its case, is to place the problem squarely before Congress. At present labor unions are left free to indulge in monopolistic practices and to thwart the NLRB in an inexcusable manner. The whole question of labor's rights under the Sherman Act ought to be reviewed, and the close relationship between this subject and national defense should spur Congress to undertake the task without further delay.

Earnings And Taxes

It is axiomatic that under our system of private ownership of industry an efficiently run business must be permitted to earn reasonable profits on invested capital, with something left over to provide for improvements and take care of emergencies. Otherwise, productive equipment would become obsolete, funds for expansion would not be forthcoming and the entire industrial plant would deteriorate. These are facts that the Government cannot afford to discount in formulating new tax plans. Because many corporations, especially those with large defense orders, have enjoyed greatly increased earnings during the past year, it may be hastily concluded that a much larger percentage of earnings can be siphoned off by the tax collector without adverse effect upon industrial activity. Those who reason thus are inclined to fall into the error of assuming that the absolute size of a company's net earnings provides a proper measure of its tax-paying ability and of the amount of new taxes that can safely be imposed.

However, to obtain a fair idea of the effect of any system of corporate taxation upon productive enterprise and investment activity the burden of taxation should be related to the amount of earnings per share of stock. Take the case of the United States Steel Corporation, for example. Last year the taxes paid by the company amounted to $9.81 per share of common stock, whereas earnings in 1940, after payment of preferred stock dividends, were equal to 7.5 per cent on the common stockholders' average equity. But for the decade 1931-40, which included four deficit years, there were no net earnings on common stock, while average earnings for the five-year period, 1936-40, equaled 3.1 per cent. Dividends paid last year on common stock amounted to only $4 per share, though 1940 was a year of extraordinary activity in which the dollar value of sales approximated that of 1929.

Proceeding from the specific to the general, it is estimated that 30 representative industrial corporations will pay out in taxes to the Federal, State, and local governments close to 50 per cent of their 1941 net earnings on common stock. Last year these companies paid out per share a good deal more for taxes than for dividends and the difference will be even greater this year. In view of this showing and also of the prospect of additional taxes, it is not surprising that common stocks of companies showing large returns from operations should be quoted at low levels in relation to earnings. In levying new taxes upon business, therefore, it is most important to relate them to existing taxes, and to consider the effect of the total tax burden upon profits. For, if corporate taxes cut too deeply into earnings, forcing them below levels that attract new capital and encourage enterprise, productivity will inevitably decline and our defense program will lose impetus.

Turkey's Role

While Greece and Yugoslavia, with British assistance, fight desperately to hold up the Nazi juggernaut, Turkey, Britain's ally since 1939, remains firmly on the sidelines. She is certainly not neutral. Still she has refrained thus far from assuming any of the burdens of belligerency. The Turkish situation is singularly complex. Her attitude may be entirely the product of strategic considerations and may fit in with Britain's war plans in the Balkans. For the Turkish army to leave their fortified positions and give battle to the German forces either in Bulgaria or Thrace, might mean courting disaster without adding materially to the Allied chances of victory. The Turkish forces, therefore, are massed along their country's western border to prevent Hitler's legions from moving on the Dardanelles. Yet the risk of that policy is obvious. If Germany succeeds in overcoming Yugoslav, Greek and British resistance in the Balkans, Turkey would be isolated and so doubly at the mercy of the Nazi Wehrmacht. Moreover, she cannot move without a green light from the Kremlin. Whether Russia's recent reaffirmation of her friendship for Turkey was such a green light is not entirely clear, since, in spite of the State Department's optimism, the Soviet Union remains too enigmatic to speculate about.

Even assuming that from a military point of view a defensive position by Turkey is the best that can be hoped for, there is the possibility that Turkey may, sooner or later, place at the disposal of the British bases from which German communications in Bulgaria and Rumania might be attacked by air. Such action would be of great advantage to the British. The Germans have a mighty force engaged in the Balkans. Their greatest vulnerability in that struggle is to be found in the matter of supply lines, which are long and tortuous and far more easily broken by concentrated air attacks than were their supply lines in the west during the blitz of last spring. But it is not yet clear, despite the repeated Turkish professions of good will for their country's besieged Balkan neighbors, that the Ankara government is prepared to go as far as to place her resources entirely at Britain's disposal.

Loring Christie

In the death of Loring Christie, Canada loses a man who was singularly well equipped for a role as interpreter between Canada and the United States. In a way none was better fitted. For, by an odd turn of fortune, he was once acting Solicitor General of the United States Government to which he was later accredited as Canadian Minister. This happened in almost routine fashion. Educated at the Harvard Law School, Mr. Christie got one of his first jobs in the Solicitor General's office in Washington, and rose rapidly till he was actually, though not substantially, running the department. In this circumstance there is some indication of Mr. Christie's legal attainments and his quality as a person. It must have been a great grief to him that he should have been laid low with illness at a time nearly a year ago when a liaison between Canada and the United States was so important. Ottawa, hoping that Mr. Christie would recover, kept him as Minister, and, even when Mr. Leighton McCarthy was appointed to the legation three months ago, the new appointee became only acting Minister. Mr. Christie had had many years of important government work behind him, but he was only 56 when he died, and there will be wide sympathy with Canada among Mr. Christie's many friends and admirers this side of the border in the loss of one of its ablest public servants. He would have been invaluable in the years of reconstruction after the war.

THE HEALER

He is the instrument of God, and the blue rivers rush through his hands,
he is the citadel of light and takes the darkness from the lands.
His is the power of the night to bring sleep to the stricken.
In his fingers the lightning flows and the swift winds quicken the flame with which his brain glows.
His is the house of the Lord's Charity and this door will not close against illness, pain or poverty.
He is the fulfillment of Heaven and in his hands the healing lies for God watches from out his eyes.

Drastic Action Needed

The deplorable effect of the strikes in essential work for the security of the United States and its aid to the brave men of Britain and Greece who are fighting for freedom gets under the skin of honest men and is a source of rejoicing for the Nazis. Our Government must and will take drastic action against the continuance of strikes. Our young men are being drafted into the Army without consulting their desires, there to kill or be killed, and without a murmur and for but a pittance.

The strikers, taking advantage of the country's needs, seem determined to hamper. They are not content with good wages, but demand more and more, while working in absolute safety, unlike the drafted young men, very many of whom have given up lucrative positions to obey their country's call—all honor to them! The Nation demands that these strikes discontinue! The Supreme Court should be the arbiter in these strikes, and its findings made compulsory, whether for or against the strikes. If these findings are not complied with, the Government ought to draft the rebellious men into the Army, as the young men were, and take them from safety and big wages to share whatever misfortunes come to the brave young who are giving their all, or, otherwise, incarcerate them on Alcatraz or in some isolated island in the Pacific Ocean and guarded from escaping by a warship making continual rounds of the island.

Count Teleki

Your editorial in The Post of March 5 about the late Count Paul Teleki, prime minister of Hungary, sounds very romantic indeed, but allow me to make one little observation in contradiction to your—maybe somewhat academic—thesis about the "Oriental" quality in that most deplorable suicide.

I knew Count Teleki personally, officially and privately. He was a distinguished gentleman, a distinguished scholar—one of the world's foremost geographers and a university professor—and a distinguished statesman. But he did not die like an Oriental. He died like a Roman, like a Roman of the noblest patrician traditions of the best time of Rome. His death was a classical death—but no more Oriental than the noble suicides any reader of Shakespeare's "Coriolanus" and "Julius Caesar" may be familiar with! De mortuis . . .

Coordinating Business

To my mind, we are all losing sight of a few facts of great importance in our country's many labor controversies. There are at least four members to any successful business, named, in order of their respective importance: Public, management, labor and capital.

You cannot get anywhere without the public's support. You must have good management to combine the needs and good will of the public with the production of labor and capital.

This last statement will stand a lot of analysis. Good management can harness labor and capital into a well-matched team, pulling together to deliver goods and services to a satisfied public, willing to reward them all accordingly.

Labor should, and will be, well paid and cared for in this kind of a setup. Capital will be attracted, gained and rewarded.

No one can prosper at the expense of all or any of the others. Until we all become aware of and keep these facts constantly in mind the Government should act as an impartial arbiter or umpire.

If these facts can be sold to our industrialists, labor leaders, Secretary of Labor and the members of the National Labor Relations Board a lot of our troubles will be over. In the defense emergency, Communists, Nazis and racketeers must be firmly and promptly dealt with to prevent them from sabotaging our efforts and the smooth working of our new labor and business plan.

Nazi Humor

It is surprising to learn that the Nazis have a sense of humor. But they most assuredly have. What extraordinary humor in complaining that we have "broken" international law in taking over the Italian and German ships in our harbors.—ships that were being sabotaged. "Break" is a word with which the Nazis are superlatively familiar, but what do they know about law, except the law of the jungle, which in no way resembles international law. Yes, the Nazis certainly have a most unique sense of humor!

Awaiting Action

This strike situation is proving to thousands why the power to act should be in one man's hand: Congress has been shown where the strikes are caused by agitators of foreign governments. The governments of foreign countries have boasted of what they would do to our defenses when the time came, and they are making good that promise while Congress slumbers peacefully on. The real American workmen went to work for the defense of their country and children, yet they have no protection from Congress to do it. Our boys and men were drafted to protect us in case of emergency. Does the Congress in Washington think the strikes are helping to protect us?

When the President wants to do things to help the country they arise and shout dictatorship, but when the ugly monster called strikes appears they sleep peacefully on. They want power. Well, this is the time to show what they can do with this power.

The whole country awaits their reply to these strikes.

C. MOSS.
Holliston, Mass., April 5.

Your three pictures of men beaten badly by their fellow workers should make a citizen ask the question, are we in a free country? Where is the law to protect the citizen who wishes to work and make his living? Are we going to allow labor to use brutal force and establish itself as a government within a government with this difference, that labor is on the spot and can and does instantly enforce its unrighteous will on the citizen worker.

Let us do something before it is too late, and remember France and its unions and labor strikes.

Individual Rights

Governments are instituted amongst men for the protection of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. But there is no protection in many places for a man who chooses not to pay dues to plutocratic labor union officials. If he takes the liberty of pursuing happiness into a plant where lawful employment and good wages await him without a permit from some grafter his wife and children will be subject to vituperation and he himself will be beaten and killed if he resists.

The right to strike is precious and should be maintained at all costs. But the right of the individual to work and to go about his business undisturbed is no less precious, and a Government which does not enforce the laws guaranteeing this right is a failure.

Unjustified strikes cannot succeed if individual rights are protected. What this country needs now is more liberty under the Constitution and the law.

Traffic Laws

There are some things that make one's blood boil. We see in the paper "Be Safe," "Drive Carefully," "Obey the Law," and a thousand other admonitions, but here is the way "Safety First" is practiced in the District of Columbia by one of the leading citizens.

On Fourteenth Street, under a "No Parking" sign, between the curb and a street car safety zone, in the rush hour of traffic, sits a large car with a small number and a chauffeur. On the night of April 2, while standing in front of the Commerce Department, I counted 18 cars which ran through the streetcar safety zone.

Should people be expected to obey the law while the people who make it disobey it?

The law of safety transcends the lawmaker." CITIZEN.

Child Labor Law And The Theater

I am one of many who are in accord with the sentiment expressed in the last paragraph of Nelson Bell's theatrical column in Sunday's Post with respect to the archaic and discriminating District Child Labor Law which precludes the possibility of Washington theatergoers witnessing such outstanding dramatic triumphs as Lillian Hellman's latest, and purportedly greatest play, "Watch on the Rhine."

This law, emanating as it does from the United States Congress, is discriminating in the sense that our national law makers do not prohibit the appearance of minors on the stage of legitimate theaters in Baltimore, for instance, where this particular play appeared just prior to it's overwhelming reception in New York City last week.

Mr. Bell states that "Miss Hellman confided she so much desired" that her play be seen in Washington. This is particularly understandable in view of the reported fact that the locale of the action takes place in and about Washington. Meantime, Washington's only legitimate playhouse was unoccupied last week!

How much longer must a long-suffering public endure a condition which forces it to journey to Baltimore or New York to witness plays of such distinction as "Watch On the Rhine" and "Life With Father," while Washington is forced to accept such fare as "Tobacco Road!" There is no valid reason why this condition should be treated as Mark Twain said of the weather, "everybody talks about it but no one does anything about it."

Why doesn't the editorial column of The Post awaken Washingtonians to the point of demanding the lawmakers amend this stupid ruling which sends them and their dollars to other cities for educational entertainment.

The Post Impressionist

Vinnie Ream

I met her at Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, and we were both on time. Zelda Branch, former student of the Vienna schools and of Sorbonne, and now ferreter into the old historic and interesting spots of Washington, was my companion.

"This is the place," I remarked, as we stood before the spacious red brick residence on K, with its west windows overlooking the colossal bronze of the admiral in Faragut Square.

"And this is the former home and studio of that ingenious and ingenuous woman, Vinnie Ream, the only person ever to model Abraham Lincoln from life."

We mounted the steps with something akin to reverence, a feeling that always comes upon me when I enter that house. Zelda Branch fell right in with my mood, as there is a sort of sacred relationship between persons who glorify the same heroes in fact and in fancy, who quote the same poetry, and appreciate the same art.

The house is now a tea room, but every brick is intact and the winding stair in the entrance hall stands quite unmarred by the passing of the decades.

In her youth Vinnie Ream had married Lieut. Richard L. Hoxie, who became a general in the United States Army. They spent their ideal married life here and the funeral cortege of each was destined to move away from that sacred domicile.

After Vinnie's death, in 1914, Gen. Hoxie, a number of years later, married Miss Ruth Norcross, a young Washington writer and patroness of the arts, who has done everything possible to locate and preserve the numerous works of art as well as to catalog the many valuable gifts from noted personages both here and abroad. A number of the art pieces she has generously presented to different historical societies.

I recall the teas and other functions which I had attended as his guest in the very room in which we were then taking tea. One evening after dinner, the general invited me to take a turn at billiards in the adjoining studio. He was a rigid disciplinarian and a dignified gentleman of the old school, but with an underlying kindliness and wit in his manner. I recall his pleasantry at my lack of cleverness in driving the ball.

The furnishings and sculptured pieces were kept intact as on the day the gifted woman put aside her chisel until some years after Gen. Hoxie's death, when the studio was dismantled.

This girl from the Western frontier was not only a sculptress but a poet and composer of music. "Her rise to such heights in the Civil War period sounds like a fairy story," Zelda Branch soliloquized as she poured herself a second cup of tea. Although she had mused and lingered at the shrines of Europe's notables, like every good avater, she was wholly sympathetic with my point of view.

"It is truly a story of the fairies, a well-loved tale. Women rarely worked in those days, not even in democratic America, but nothing deterred this windblown genius from the trackless prairies, the embodiment of youthful vigor, when she decided to take up the study of art in the National Capital."

George Brandeis, Danish historian who met Vinnie in Italy where she had gone to sculpture the statue of the Great Emancipator, found her to be one of the most amazing and remarkable women he had ever known. "Her conversation was new," he wrote in his memoirs. "A breath of the great Republic swept through it . . . she possessed a naive kindliness with the very devil of the rush and forward march about her . . . always in a hurry."

She achieved almost the impossible in securing a position as amanuensis in the Postoffice Department at $600 per year. In her heart of hearts she resolved some day to model President Lincoln. Amazed at her credulity, a friendly Representative in Congress was finally persuaded to approach the President regarding a sitting. Lincoln brushed him aside—he was too busy, too homely, too occupied with affairs of state.

When the Representative dwelt on her youth, her poverty and her struggles, the heart of the great rail-splitter was touched. She could come and model him providing he could pursue his work undisturbed.

"In her declining years she would speak touchingly of her days in the presence of the great man—in this very room, perhaps," I ventured.

She knew him as a man of sorrow following the death of his young son. Later, she experienced the impact of the tragic news of his assassination when an excited horseman dashed through the streets shouting into the darkness—"Lincoln has been assassinated! The President is dead!"

When Congress decided to erect a statue to Lincoln, Vinnie's model was chosen. She went to Carrari, Italy, and selected the marble and then to Paris to study under Bonnet. She completed her lessons under Majoli in Rome. In 20 months she returned with her completed work, which now stands in the Capitol.

She made busts and medallions of many prominent officials in both church and state. When in Paris, she modeled both Franz Liszt and Gustave Dore from life, and a bust of Cardinal Antonelli in Rome. In America, she made many fine works of art. Among them are "Admiral Farragut," "The Dying Standard Bearer," "Spartacus," "The West" and "Sequoyah."

"It is worth a trip to Arlington Cemetery to see the 'Muse of Poetry,' Vinnie's own work, surmounting the Hoxie tomb holding both hers and the general's ashes," I concluded. "You will remember the matchless inscription on the tobm, 'The words that would praise thee are impotent.'"

Plain Words

Admiral Land On Shipbuilding

IN BLUNT NAVY language, Admiral Land, Chairman of the Maritime Commission, has presented facts about shipbuilding.

LINDLEY

Our present ship construction effort is at least 200 per cent greater than the most we have ever before attempted in this line.

We now have under contract 913 naval vessels, plus 1,000 small craft for naval use, to cost more than $7,500,000,000.

Contracts now awarded or authorized call for about 950 new merchant ships, to cost about $2,000,000,000.

Our shipbuilding facilities are stretched to the limit. Their ability to expand will be stretched to the limit by the program already authorized. Further expansion can be made only at the expense of efficiency and economy "and with delay in the delivery of the vessels now ordered and authorized."

The significance of Admiral Land's statements is this: He is under tremendous pressure to embark on an additional merchant-ship building program of gargantuan proportions. There is talk of adding 1,000 to 3,000 merchant ships to present schedules. This is supported by some other Administration officials and experts. Sir Arthur Salter head of the British shipping mission, just arrived in this country, is understood to want the United States to build several mass-production shipyards on the model of the famous Hog Island yards of World War I.

THE AIM of these plans is to replace present and expected losses to Nazi submarines, planes and raiders and then to build still more to take care of the added strain placed on shipping by the great American arms-production program (in hauling in raw materials, as well as in delivering finished products), the use of convoys and the necessity of relying on such roundabout routes as that via the Cape of Good Hope to the Red Sea and Suez Canal, instead of the shorter route through the Straits of Gibraltar and the Mediterranean.

In the titanic shipbuilding program undertaken in World War I, we turned out 2,300 ships at a cost of $3,000,000,000. But this was over a five-year period. And, Admiral Land emphasizes, not one of them was finished soon enough to be of service during the war. Also, our naval building program at that time was tiny, in comparison with our present two-ocean fleet program.

The question to be decided, as Admiral Land sees it, is whether this Nation—and Great Britain—want ships completed in 1941 and 1942 or whether they want them later. He admits that more ships can be started than are at present authorized. But, he insists, if they are started, the delivery of those already authorized will be delayed. This is because the expansion already planned calls for the maximum dilution of managerial ability and skilled labor that is feasible without serious loss of efficiency.

The choice, as Admiral Land sees it, is between completing a smaller number of ships and starting a larger number. He is interested in finished ships—this year and next.

ADMIRAL LAND says frankly that it is highly improbable that British losses, at their present rate, can be replaced by new ships. These losses are now at a rate close to 5,000,000 tons a year. British merchant marine production is probably around 1,500,000 tons. Ours, when it reaches full speed in 1942, will be 3,500,000 to 4,000,000 tons. Meanwhile, a considerable deficiency will have accumulated.

We could, he says, assemble enough shipping to provide the British with 200,000 tons a month. This would mean, probably, transferring our intercoastal and other ships, perhaps to be replaced by seized Italian, German and Danish ships. The sacrifice, at least, for this year would be "tremendous."

But merely building more ships to feed to Nazi submarines, surface raiders and airplanes is, according to Admiral Land, like putting fuel on the fire. The sensible thing to do, as he sees it, is to try to check the fire.

For licking the submarine he has a definite program:

1. Bomb enemy shipbuilding plants.
2. Bomb repair and rest stations for enemy submarines.
3. Let the British use more combatant ships in convoy.
4. Let the British combatant vessels convoy farther out on outbound voyages from Great Britain and also meet incoming ships farther out.
5. Convoy only slow ships. Fast merchant ships seem to have a better chance of escaping when they are outside convoys.
6. Destroy the German air patrol over the Atlantic.
7. Use air patrols with convoys.

These are specific and practical suggestions.

ADMIRAL LAND specifies that the British should use the additional combatant ships. This would mean transferring more of our destroyers and perhaps some cruisers. Most of our top-ranking active naval officers would prefer using them under the American flag.

One other possibility is hinted at vaguely by Admiral Land. That is to defer battleship construction to make way for more merchant ships. More freighters in 1942 may be worth more than more battleships in 1946.

Admiral Land speaks as an expert on all types of ship construction, as a former Navy man—for five years he was Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Construction and Repair—and as head of the Federal agency charged with building up the merchant marine. Others may size up the problem differently, but he has laid his cards on the table.

Circus Fans Hit Raise in Rental To Ringling Circus

". . . and, furthermore, you'd squawk, too, if your rent was boosted from $150 to $833.33 a day," the circus fan wailed.

Melvin D. Hildreth, board chairman and former president of the Circus Fans Association of America, was worked up over the situation yesterday. Seems the Office of National Capital Parks, which administers the circus lot at Twenty-first and C Streets Northeast, is asking a $2,500 renal for the Ringling show's three-day engagement next month, compared with $450 last year.

"Why, it may even mean the wor-r-rld's greatest amusement attraction will have to pass up Washington this season, "Hildreth moaned. "Other members of the James E. Cooper Top, C. F. A., feel the same way I do about it. Somehow, some way, we've got to bring that price down."

"There'll be a decision along in a week or 10 days," a parks official said.

Judge S. C. Mize Of Mississippi, To Sit Here April 21

Federal Judge Sidney C. Mize, of the Southern District of Mississippi, will sit in District Court here from April 21 to May 3, to help clear a crowded civil court docket of approximately 1,500 cases, it was announced yesterday.

Henry P. Chandler, director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, said he had requested jurists throughout the country to serve temporarily here and in New York City.

The congestion of the District Cout docket is causing nonjury trials as much as 11 months delay, while jury trials are waiting approximately 13 months, it was said.

Two jurists completed volunteer services here last Friday. They were Judge W. Calvin Chestnut, of Baltimore, and Judge Alfred D. Barksdale, of the Western District of Virginia.

Dear Ma:

Well, I am supposed to be in the Army for only a year's training, but I have got so mutch to lern that I am afraid I will be here for the draft Army's junior prom. I no this is selective serviss, but I wish they wood not keep selecting so many things for a soljer to lern in such a short time, ma.

About all a Army used to need was a couple of drums, some bugels and plenty of guns and all a soljer had to know was how to shoot and not to stumble over a rock. There wasn't mutch to it except getting good and soar at a enemy. But today a soljer has got to have almost a college educashun. He has got to no about everything from chemistry and higher mathermetics to minnerology and how to read a map with no outside help.

I am being lernt map reading witch is not so easy as I always thought. Every common soljer is serposed to read maps fluently so he can tell a general where he is when a general gets lost and things like that, ma. I gess you think like I did that maps are just things put out by the gasoline people for advertising and that you just read them by looking for the heavy red lines marked Roote 21, Roote 14 and so fourth, but in the Army it is mutch harder. In old time wars a soljer sumtimes didn't know where he had been even five years after the war, but today he has to be able to get where he has been befoar he even gets there.

I am squawking a little about all this map reading when a officer explanes to me that it is all for my own good becuz if I get into a fight I can't just walk up to a pumping station and ask for directions witch way the enermy went. Like if there is war and I am in it I can't just ask a cop weather to turn right or left on the next traffic light to locate a skirmish. I got to be a Grade A map reader and read a map just like I wood read a book witch ain't so fast at that I gess, ma.

* * * *

Now, when you read a map on a week end auto trip you don't reely read at all, you just follow red lines and circles, but in the Army you got to be able to look at a map and read hills and vallies and mountains and rivers and everything and where a civilyun would look at a map and just see State highways and hot dog stands and gas stations a soljer has to look at a map and see trees and bushes and bridges and I gess even to tell where to turn right or left for more mud.

* * * *

I have not got to be no expert map reader yet on account of the Army map is so different from the maps at Harry's gas and oil station but I am doing my best so do not worry as I gess if war comes I will no enuff not to get lost. Your loving son,

Beverly Kelley, commenting on a recent pelican treatise in this column, says that, despite its hoggishness, a pelican will never touch a catfish. "Catfish have needles that would stick in the throat of a bird, so Mr. Pelican gives it a wide berth, even taking it on the lam when it sees one," he says.

Of course it's erroneous, but the impression one gets from Washington activities is that a war can be won by just writing sufficient checks for large enough amounts.

We've got around to a contest to pick a Miss Liberty, so it may be expected that the masses of Americans will at last be able to concentrate on the crisis confronting 'em.

Danger In The Mediterranean

WHILE THE MASTERY of the eastern Mediterranean is disputed in the twisted passes of the Balkans, concern is suddenly rising here over the situation in the western Mediterranean. Col. William J. Donovan, in his report to our authorities, aptly described the Mediterranean as "the no man's land of the Second World War."

ALSOP

And nothing better illustrates the degree of responsibility already assumed by this country for the Second World War's outcome than the fact that something very like intervention in the western Mediterranean is now under consideration.

The situation which is causing such concern is fairly simple in broad outline. The two entrances to the west Mediterranean are the Straits of Gibraltar and the 70-mile-wide passage between Sicily and Africa. With a German air fleet in Sicily, the British warships based on Alexandria cannot control the western half of the Mediterranean without a base there. Their only base is at Gibraltar, which probably can be held for a long siege but cannot serve as a base when subjected to air attack from near at hand.

Thus if French North Africa, Spain and Spanish Morocco go over to Germany, the western Mediterranean will become a German lake. German ships can make the passage from French ports to Africa with impunity. German-African expeditions can be amply supplied. Eventually, the Germans can bring the northern half of the African Atlantic coast, from Dakar upward, under their control. With additional submarine harbors and air fields in this area, the Germans can drive the convoys traveling between Britain and the Middle and Far East almost over to Brazil.

THE CRUCIAL Battle of the Atlantic will once more be terribly affected by the struggle in the Mediterranean, as it has already been by the strain of supplying Wavell's forces. Meanwhile, with the Suez Canal still periodically blocked by German air mines, and the western Mediterranean impassable even for emergency convoys, the position of Wavell's forces will also become far more precarious.

Such is the danger. It is causing concern at the moment because of the progressive degeneration of the French north African position. There is little doubt, even among the now Francophobe British, of the desire to resist of the French chieftain in North Africa, Marshal Weygand. That was proved in January, when a warning of German aggression emanating from the Vatican caused Weygand to call up his forces and put his provinces in a posture of defense. The question now is whether Weygand will be able to resist.

Weygand has in the neighborhood of 200,000 troops, with ample small arms and ammunition, but without heavy artillery, mechanized equipment or tanks. He had a fairly impressive air force, including perhaps 900 first-line planes, but it is now thought that the German Armistice Commission has been able to force him to put at least a part of these planes out of combat condition. With this strength he must not only ward off threats from without he must also govern a large native population.

IN ORDER to help Weygand in his task and increase his power to resist, the able counselor of the American Embassy at Vichy, Robert Murphy, was sent to ascertain his needes five months ago. Murphy learned that Weygand needed tea and sugar for the natives, oil for local industry, and certain other things. Our Government then proposed to the British that these things be supplied to Weygand. The British Ministry of Economic Warfare offered strong opposition, and the project fell through.

Since then, the Germans have ousted the ineffectual Italian negotiators in French North Africa. In their military mission of between 50 and 60, the German army's entire Arab department is included. The usual bribery and corruption has been carried on among the natives and the lower French officials. And more than one serious native riot has already occurred.

Meanwhile the Spaniards have concentrated rather more than 200,000 troops in Spanish Morocco. The Germans are constantly increasing their strength in Libya, ferrying the men across in large air transports at the rate of many hundred a day and running the equipment across by sea at night. The Spanish forces are not more than half effective, yet the threat is grave. It will become acute if internal unrest in French North Africa increases much further, for then the Germans will be able to say to the Spaniards, "Now is your last chance to satisfy your territorial ambitions. The French are rotten. Either you go now, or get nothing later." As all Spain is starving, Franco is reluctant to take the risk of being cut off from food from the outside by the British blockade. But if French North Africa seems to be disintegrating from within, Franco will be far more likely to obey the Germans. Thus the jig in the western Mediterranean may perhaps be up.

ALL THIS, of course, sounds very gloomy. It leaves out the counter measures now under consideration, which may well avert the danger. These include sending additional American diplomatic officials and military observers into French North Africa, to reinforce morale; doing the things for Weygand which we proposed to do during the winter, and which the British are now anxious for us to do; and perhaps dispatching an American naval vessel or two to Casa Blanca as a sort of demonstration of our interest in the war.

KINTNER

While complecency is foolish, there is ample ground for hope that quick, determined action may yet save the day. But even if the day is saved, the risks run by delay and indecision between the British and Americans should be a sharp lessen in the need for joint, long-term planning of British-American war strategy.

Britain's Best in Men, Arms Awaits Germans in Greece

Edward Kennedy, Brooklyn-born Associated Press staff member, was with British advance forces in the North African offensive which pushed Italians west beyond Bengasi. Stationed in Cairo since last summer, he has gone to Greece with British expeditionary forces. Here he describes that transfer of British troops.

By Edward Kennedy.

Associated Press Staff Writer

Athens, April 8.—A great British army, equipped with the best weapons the combined industries of the British Empire and the United States could provide, is spread over a large part of the Greek peninsula ready for a major test with the Germans.

This expeditionary force, landed here with negligible losses compared with the extent of the operation, is composed of the pick of the Army of the Nile—the powerful military machine Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell assembled in Egypt in the last year and sent on a victory sweep against the Italians through eastern Libya.

Included are famous English regiments, hardy Australian troops who rolled back the Italians in Libya, fresh New Zealand forces and many special units drawn from all parts of the far-flung British Empire.

Supplementing this army which has come to Greece prepared to profit by lessons British learned at Dunkerque and in Norway, is a battle fleet claiming absolute mastery of the Mediterranean.

Frozen Beef Aplenty

Although the Royal Air Force has been operating in Greece since Italy launched her invasion last October, the first ground units did not leave Egypt until March 10.

In the interim, vast quantities of stores, including food supplies for the Greeks, were convoyed across the Mediterranean.

So much Australian frozen beef was shipped across that adequate cold storage facilities could not be found, and some was released for sale to the Greek civil population.

Many of the supply convoys and the troop convoys which followed were attacked by planes, but losses were remarkably small. Italian aircraft were almost entirely absent from these attacks, reflecting Italy's present impotence in the Mediterranean, the British say.

My trip across apparently was typical. We set out from an Egyptian port with heavily laden British freighters, shadowed by a reconnaissance plane.

Torpedoes Miss Mark

We expected an attack, and it came an hour before nightfall, as three German bombers appeared, swooped low and dropped torpedoes which went at least a mile wide of their mark.

A half-hour later, three other planes attacked, flying into a barrage being put up by four warships. Six big bombs landed not far from the largest vessel in the convoy.

One plane broke formation and scooted off, apparently damaged in the wing.

Three more raiders came over at dusk and loosed torpedoes which failed to take effect.

By dawn, the convoy was carefully picking its way through mine fields in Greek territorial waters, and the rest of the trip was uneventful.

The heaviest attack reported during the convoy operations was launched by 40 planes which swooped down on one convoy as it was returning to Egypt. All were beaten off without loss.

A number of American planes are waiting to be tested in combat in this area.

Gen. Wavell remains in Egypt in supreme command of all operations in the Middle East.

The Gallup Poll

Favor Price Fixing

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., April 8.—With billions of dollars being pumped into industry for defense production, one of the biggest economic problems before the country is how to prevent runaway prices and excessive wage rises—how to stall off an inflationary boom that may collapse in a new depression when the war in Europe is over.

Many observers, bitterly recalling the 108-per-cent jump in the American cost of living during the last war, think the Federal Government should start fixing prices and wages. The Government has already placed compulsory price limits on a few materials and has appointed Leon Henderson to the task of dealing with the price-inflation problem. But many authorities agree with Bernard M. Baruch that these measures may not be adequate for the future.

Quite apart from the economic aspects, the most important factor in price-fixing and wage-fixing is whether public opinion will accept such action—whether businessmen will consent to price-fixing and wage earners to wage-fixing.

Price-Fixing Favored

To determine public opinion on this important issue, the American Institute of Public Opinion has completed a Nation-wide survey which shows the country's first reaction. With discussion of the subject just beginning in the public press, the country's attitude at this stage may be summarized as follows:

1. Taking the Nation as a whole, sentiment is in favor of fixing prices at their present levels. The white-collar class, and the skilled, semiskilled and unskilled laboring classes are particularly anxious to have prices fixed, the survey shows, but businessmen as a group are much less willing.

2. National sentiment is about evenly divided on the question of fixng wages and salaries at the present level. A majority of the laboring or wage-earning classes interviewed in the survey favor such action, but the white-collar classes and the businessmen themselves are opposed.

Apparently much more effort would be needed to convert the public to the idea of wage-fixing than to "sell" it the idea of price-fixing.

Two Questions Asked

Two questions were asked in the survey of a cross-section of men and women in all walks of life. The first dealt with price-fixing, as follows:

"Would you like to see the Federal Government fix prices so that as long as the war in Europe lasts everything you buy will cost the same as it does now?"

Fewer than one voter in every ten (9 per cent) was without an opinion. The rest with opinions divided as follows:

	Favor Price Fixing	Opposed
National Vote	68%	32%
Businessmen	53	47
Farmers	61	39
White-Collar Workers	68	32
Skilled, Semiskilled & Unskilled Labor	80	20

Most observers insist that, if prices are to be fixed, wages must also be fixed as a corollary, in order to keep the two in balance. Therefore the second question in the survey was:

"Would you like to see the Federal Government keep all salaries at the present level so that nobody's wage could be cut and nobody could get an increase as long as they did the same kind of work, until the present war in Europe is over?"

On this question 12 per cent expressed no opinion. The rest with opinions voted as follows:

	Favor Fixing Wages	Opposed
National Vote	52%	48%
Businessmen	42	58
Farmers	55	45
Skilled, Semiskilled & Unskilled Labor	57	43

In general, the survey found that many businessmen oppose price-fixing and wage-fixing purely on the ground that it would mean too much Government interference. Others say that wages should vary according to the cost of living.

Wage-earners, the majority of whom favor the freezing of wages at present levels, either say they are satisfied with their present pay or that they prefer to have a stabilized wage rather than take the chance of a wage cut, on the one hand, or a wage raise on the other.

Russia And Germany

By Barnet Nover

Are They Nearing A Break?

THE TREATY of nonaggression which the Soviet Union concluded with Yugoslavia on Saturday only a few hours before the latter country was attacked by the Reich, has led many to conclude that Russia is on the eve of another diplomatic about-face. The assumption is that in openly manifesting its friendship for Hitler's intended victim the Kremlin was underlining its displeasure with Germany's Balkan venture. The policy initiated by Russia with the signing of the Molotoff-Ribbentrop pact in August, 1939, it is being said, is about to be scrapped.

This theory has something to recommend it. But it goes too fast and too far in jumping at conclusions. A shift in Russian policy vis-a-vis Germany is not improbable. Indeed, such a shift has already occurred. But it has been slow, cautious and thus far inconclusive.

WHEN BULGARIA joined the Axis, Russia remained silent. Her silence was only broken two days later with the dispatch of a note of protest to the Sofia government. That development has since been followed up by a reaffirmation of Russian friendship toward Turkey, a firm denial by Moscow that Russia has not the slightest intention of stabbing Turkey in the back should the latter become involved in war and, now, by the Russo-Yugoslav pact.

It is notable that official pictures of the signing of that treaty published in Moscow revealed the presence at the ceremonies of Josef Stalin. The Russian press was later allowed to declare that Yugoslavia was the victim of an aggression. And the Izvestia has stated that the Russo-Yugoslav pact is not a "purely formal" document.

SO FAR SO GOOD. The fact remains that the published terms of that pact, for all that they breathe of friendship between the two Slav nations, do not in the least conflict with the Russo-German pact of August, 1939.

Article 1 of the latter agreement stipulated that:

"The two contracting powers undertake to refrain from any act of force, any aggressive act, and any attacks against each other or in conjunction with any other powers."

Article 2 of that same treaty stipulates that if either party "should become the object of warlike action on the part of a third power, the other contracting power will in no way support the third power."

Thus far Russia has remained completely aloof from the Balkan struggle and has given no aid to either Yugoslavia or Greece. Hence Moscow cannot be accused by Germany of not having lived up to the letter of the Ribbentrop-Molotoff agreement, however much it may have departed from its spirit. Insofar as the Russo-Yugoslav pact was intended as a warning to Hitler that Russia does not like what he is now doing Germany can, therefore, dismiss it as merely an annoying pinprick. Indeed, the fact that Russia had to take a roundabout course in showing her opposition to the Reich suggests that in this instance, as in the case of other anti-German moves in the Balkans, Russia continues to move not from strength but from weakness.

THE INCLUSION of the Balkans in Hitler's "new order" cannot by any stretch of the imagination be regarded in Moscow as compatible with Russia's interests. The long-range prospects of such a development can only be intensely distasteful to the Russian leaders. If Germany establishes her dominance in southeastern Europe, Turkey would be isolated, Russia might ultimately find herself not with a weak and friendly power but with a powerful rival along her Black Sea flank and in control of the passageway between southern Russia and the Mediterranean.

It is obviously to Russia's interests to prevent German domination of the Balkans and the Dardanelles from taking place. But the very fact that with the disappearance of the Baltic republics and Poland and the German occupation of Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria the borders of Germany and Russia march together for hundreds of miles tends to intensify Russian timidity while increasing her alarm.

A bold anti-German policy by Russia at this time might give Hitler the pretext for an invasion of the Ukraine and the Caucasus, an operation which because of Germany's foothold in the Black Sea coasts of Rumania and Bulgaria might be undertaken with naval as well as land and air forces. Russia, while recognizing the possibility of such an attack at some future time, say in the event that Hitler's Balkan drive is stalemated and he finds himself desperately in need of Russian oil and wheat, is not yet prepared to indulge in any bold preventive measures.

There is the possibility, of course, that if the German armies do not succeed in overruning Yugoslavia and Greece in short order Russia might send aid to those countries and Turkey. It was perhaps to spike such a move on Russia's part that Germany broke precedent by announcing a state of war between herself and Yugoslavia and Greece, announcing as she did so that those Balkan kingdoms had conspired against her. Russian aid on the nonintervention model created by Hitler and Mussolini during the Spanish civil war or on a lend-lease basis would thus be equivalent to a direct repudiation of the August, 1939, pact.

About all that can be said of Russian policy today is that Stalin has moved out of the Ribbentrop room into a nearby corridor. He is not yet ready to evacuate the house that Hitler built with his consent and cooperation.

Insulated School Buildings Increase

A marked increase in the amount of insulating board used in finishing school and college interiors was reported for 1940 by the structural inculation industry. Much of this gain is attributed to the sound quieting values of the board.

Educators have found that children make better progress when distracting noises are reduced. Not only are teachers able to make themselves better heard, but the pupils are able to concentrate more closely.

A large percentage of the board used in schools is installed in gymnasiums and auditoriums. The insulating board cuts down the din from excited children at play and makes it possible for bands and orchestras to practice without disturbing students in other rooms.

Big Projects For Region Proposed

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 8.—An "Atlantic coastal highway" from New England to the South, public beaches and rehabilitation of slums were proposed today as possible projects to "cushion" the next depression in the Middle Atlantic States.

The proposals were listed in a "long-range development" program for States from New York to North Carolina in a regional study by the National Resources Planning Board.

Such projects might be built in depression years to stimulate recovery, be spaced through several years to maintain an even level of public spending and "an orderly pattern for State and community development.

"Boom" End Awaited

The report was prepared under direction of Morton L. Wallerstein, Richmond, board regional chairman, in the Baltimore office, who indicated that some of the projects recommended might be started at the end of the "defense boom to offset an expected economic downturn then.

Major proposals for the area included:

Rehabilitation of 1,000,000 acres of "actual or potential urban blighted areas."

An Atlantic coastal highway connecting New England, New York City, Washington and the South, bypassing all large cities.

Extension of the Skyline Drive from Virginia through Pennsylvania and New York to New England, along with parkways in metropolitan areas.

New Public Beaches

Large public beaches, particularly at Barnegat Inlet, N. J.; Chesapeake Bay near Baltimore, and the ocean front of Delaware, Maryland and Virginia, plus construction of large public parks.

"Gradual replacement" of 1,500,000 substandard dwellings with new housing within reach of low-income families.

Greater use of water supply for human and industrial uses, along with pollution and flood control on the Delaware, Susquehanna and Potomac Rivers.

Retirement of 29,000,000 acres of submarginal farm land, and "reclamation of 1,000,000 acres of premature and substandard land subdivisions in urban areas."

New educational facilities on large sites of 15 to 50 acres for "combined community, educational and recreational programs" for adults and children alike.

"Realistic appraisal by States and cities of their industrial needs and advantages," and encouragement of only new industries which promise "reasonable ability . . . to become permanent community assets."

The report, which emphasized that State and local planning agencies should "become an integral part of the regular governmental machinery," said planning improvements was more difficult in the Middle Atlantic States because "it involves to a great degree more costly processes of reshaping severely exploited facilities on overcrowded land."

Lane Denies Indorsement Of Mrs. Byron

By the Associated Press

Frederick, Md., April 8.—Mrs. Katherine Byron today pressed her campaign for the Democratic nomination for Congress, minus the indorsement of William Preston Lane, jr., Democratic National Committeeman from Maryland and chairman of the party's central committee in Washington County.

Mrs. Byron said here that reports she had claimed the support of Lane were apparently based on a "misunderstanding."

(In Hagerstown, Lane said Mrs. Byron "must have been misunderstood." He said "I have not promised to support any candidate." Lane himself had been prominently mentioned for the seat vacated by the death of Mrs. Byron's husband, William D. Byron, but he has said he will not seek or accept the nomination.)

Mrs. Byron said she was confident she would receive the backing of the Washington County Democratic committee. The county is expected to be a pivotal point in the election to choose a successor to Representative Byron in the Sixth Maryland District.

While Mrs. Byron continued efforts to consolidate her strength in her home county, members of the Allegany County Democratic central committee tentatively have voted to support W. Earle Cobey, Frostburg attorney. The indorsement, however, hinged on the action to be taken by the Washington committee. Members said they might shift to Mrs. Byron in the event she got the indorsement of her home committee.

Scottish Rite to Hold Maundy Thursday

The Scottish Rite Masonic bodies of Alexandria will participate in the annual traditional Maundy Thursday rites tomorrow night at 7 in the Masonic Temple on Cameron Street, when the lights of the lodge will be extinguished at a mystic banquet climaxing the Holy Week observance. Members of the order will reconvene in the temple on Easter morning for the relighting ceremony.

Similar programs will be held by Scottish Rite bodies throughout the Nation at the same time. Attending the Alexandria celebration will be members of the city's four Rite bodies, as well as members of other chapters throughout the Northern Virginia area.

Following the relighting ceremony on Sunday morning, members of the order will attend the annual Easter morning breakfast at Gadsby's Tavern at 8 o'clock. The breakfast will be served by the ladies auxiliary to Alexandria Post 24, of the American Legion.

Riley W. Nixon and Roger C. Sullivan are cochairman for the annual ceremony.

A. Slater Lamond has been elected as wise master of Randolph Chapter, Knights Rose Croix, one of the four Alexandria bodies which will participate in the Easter program. He succeeds Erdman T. Stulz, who has served for the past year.

Other new officers of the chapter are Julian S. Whitestone, senior warden; David E. Bayliss, jr., junior warden; Robert G. Leachman, secretary; John G. Cox, treasurer; Myron R. Walker, orator; Harry A. Leake, master of ceremonies; Josiah S. Everly, expert; Fred H. Bloom, assistant expert; H. P. Shaffer, standard bearer; Benjamin Edwards, guardian of the temple; Thomas E. Mills, tiler; Samuel E. Wade, organist, and A. M. Sherwood, almoner.

A group of 18 students successfully completed a 90-hour aviation ground school course conducted by the Alexandria Gazette in cooperation with the Civil Aeronautics Authority, under the direction of Lincoln Frederick Stock, CAA instructor. The course was offered over a period of 25 weeks.

Two of the students, James Smith and Frank Wedderburn, who attained the highest scholastic rating, are to receive scholarships for eight hours of free flying instruction at a nearby airport.

Others who are to receive certificates of proficiency for successfully completing the course are Robert Bender, B. N. Buntin, jr., James Carter Harvey Clapp, Robert Craddock, Norman Healy, David Haynes, Mrs. Henrietta Liwski, Douglas Lindsey, Dorothy Smith, James Smith, Mrs. Bette Wedderburn, Grace Wedderburn, Gus Wedderburn, Phrocene Hamilton, John Barclay and Malcolm Bradley.

Major Kent, Principal in Killing, Freed

By the Associated Press

Richmond, April 8.—Maj. Robert C. Kent, jr., convicted in Botetourt Circuit Court in September, 1934, of kidnaping Mrs. Mary J. Hastings, Blue Ridge Springs hotel operator, left the Virginia State prison farm in Goochland County today a free man.

Sentenced to a term of 13 years, Maj. Kent won his freedom after time by reason of the 15 days a month credit allowed for good behavior

Ill much of the time since his commitment November 10, 1934, he spent many months under medical care at the penitentiary here and at the State farm. A prison official said he understood Maj. Kent intended going to Washington immediately to enter a hospital there. He is a World War veteran and a member of a prominent Virginia family.

The bullet-pierced body of Mrs. Hastings was found near Stroudsburg, Pa., June 27, 1934, three days after she left Blue Ridge Springs with Kent on an automobile trip. Kent was indicted both for kidnaping and murder, but there was uncertainty as to jurisdiction on the murder charge and he was brought to trial at Fincastle on the kidnaping accusation 2½ months after his arrest.

Counsel for Kent carried his case to the State Supreme Court of Appeals in a futile effort to obtain a reversal of the penitentiary sentence. Kent contended throughout the prolonged legal battle that he was innocent.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Stick-up Woman

"You say you do scientific research, Miss Digges? . . . How perfectly fascinating! I'd love to hear more about it. I do like to meet people who are doing things—real things I mean. Say, couldn't you come out to dinner some night next week? . . . Oh you are! Well what about the weke after next? . . . Oh do you work that late every evening? . . . Well I suppose you just get so absorbed in your work you can't stop.

"I really would like to see more of you Miss Digges. I have a little friend I want you to meet. She's perfectly fascinating. She does the most marvelous modeling in jello. I know you two would be crazy about each other. Say now, why don't you come out to dinner some Sunday? I'd have her over and—What? . . Oh, but what do you do with your Sundays? . . . Oh I see! Well I suppose it is hard when you have only one day off. Still on the other hand that's all the more reason why you should have some recreation.

"Say now why couldn't you come out some Sunday afternoon for tea? I'd have in a few friends and—what? . . Oh you are! What kind of outside work? . . . A BOOK! No! Don't tell me you're writing a book! How perfectly fascinating! You know I've always wanted to write a book and I just bet you could give me some pointers. What kind of a book is it? . . . Oh, on your research! How terribly interesting!

"You know I have so many literary friends who'd love to meet you. I wonder if you wouldn't come some time ad talk to our Book Lovers' Group? . . . . Oh, you don't . . . ell maybe you could just come to tea. We're having a tea next Wednesday and I think it would be awfully nice if you could come and meet some of our women—What? . . . Your busy day? . . Now isn't that too bad!

"Oh, say, our club's going to have a pageant a week from tomorrow night and I'd like you for to be my guest. It's going to show the progress of womanhood and is really going to be a very lovely event. And then of course we'll have refreshments afterward, and you'd get to meet some of our women. They're really very lovely—What? . . . Out of town! Now isn't that too bad!

How long will you be gone? . . Oh just a week? . . Then you'll be back in time for our club open house! Oh my sister is coming from California the end of the month and I do want you to meet her. Her husband's a big chemist and you two would have so much in common. And then of course I want to talk to you about my book. Now just as soon as you get back I'm going to give you a ring and see if we can't get together!"

Perfume for the Easter Bonnet

Multi-colored artificial flowers that will perch on milady's chapeau or adorn her suit lapel on Easter Sunday may be given the quality of versimilitude by being sprayed with a matching perfume. The secret is to apply the same fragrance as the real flower. For example, if the spring confection you're wearing on your head is trimmed or made entirely with apple blossoms, then spray on some of that delightfully refreshing "Apple Blossom" perfume or toilet water. Or, if your corsage is made of artificial violets, then apply perfume with a violet base. Perfumes are made from practically all the blossoms that trim your hat, dress or accessories. Therefore, it should be easy to find a perfume that will blend or duplicate the flowers on your hat. Peggy French, captivating starlet of a recent Broadway production (shown above), applies lilac perfume to match the bunch of lilacs on the Sally Victor hat in her hands. Once you have applied the perfume to your artificial flowers the most discerning eyes will be hard put to tell whether the flowers are real or artificial

Start a Tub Lily Pond

WHEN enchanting lily pools can so quickly be made from ordinary containers, there's no reason why any backyard should remain dull and bare of beauty!

You just sink into the ground a wooden tub, half a barrel or a ready-made metal container. Fill half full of soil, then add about a half inch of clean sand and fill to the top with water.

Now, except for planting your lilies, you've practically finished work on your pool for the summer! No weeding; you just add water once in a while to make up for evaporaiton.

Specially suited to the small pool are pigmy water lilies, which yield as many as a hundred waxy blooms a summer—in white, yellow or red. To plant the hardy kind, just press a section of rootstock into the mud.

Then, for atmosphere, circle your pool with flagstones, tuck creeping buttercup and forget-me-nots into the crevices. For background, let quick-to-grow Japanese hop ramble over your fence; plant sturdy shrubs.

And if you want to add a woodsy rock garden, to have a pool of gorgeous lotuses or tropical lilies—no reason why you shouldn't!

Our 40-page booklet, GARDENING MADE EASY, tells how you can easily grow lovely water lilies—lotuses, hardy and tropical lilies. Gives directions for rock gardens, herb and vegetable gardens. Advises on shrubs and vines, planting flower borders, trees, roses, gourds. Tells how to propagate plants.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, GARDENING MADE EASY, to the New York Office of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Let's Be Realists, Says Woman Reader, and Admit That Proposal of Marriage Is Only Acceptable Proof Of Man's 'Good Faith' in a Romantic Relationship

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Alexandra B.." and your answer to her (published April 4), interest me, because 20 years ago I, too, was a young professional woman, committed to an indulgent friendship with a man my own age. Like "Alexandra," I was neither jealous nor suspicious, and any thought of trying to "stampede the gentleman into either marriage or a servile position in the sentimental relationship" would have been as foreign to my nature as it is to hers.

For 20 years, this man claimed he loved me, and I thought he showed his love to the best of his ability. Marriage was delayed year after year, because of his family situation, so he said;—an explanation which I accepted as reasonable. I believed his continual assurances of sincerity and loyal affection, and I had absolute trust in his honor and idealistic attitude toward our relationship.

I refused invitations from other men, unless he was included, and he knew this was true. I never doubted his word when he said he was working in the evenings, bowling or going to social affairs connected with his work,—in which "outsiders" could not be included. I encouraged him to have interests aside from me, as I thought this was normal and wholesome. And as we grew older, he meant more and more to my life. My friends were all marrying and busy raising their children. Still I waited.

Suddenly, like a bolt from the blue, I learned he had been philandering for many years. His stories of evening work, bowling and semiprofessional social engagements were mostly untrue. He had faked headaches and petty ailments many times to take leave of me—only to go with other woman. Yet all the while he pretended there was no change in his deep love for me, nor any lessening of desire to continue our life together.

He drained my finances by cheerfully accepting aid for all sorts of advantages which his limited earnings could not provide. Now, at the age of 45, I must build a new life, for he is infatuated with a middle aged widow, and he wishes to have nothing more to do with me. He appears to have forgotten the years of happiness, sharing and close companionship which he knew constituted for me a bond as sacred as marriage would have been. He admits I never failed him.

I broke up the little home into which I had put my fondest hopes for our future. I am forced to resign my good job and leave the city where I have lived for 30 years—in order to escape surroundings which stir poignant memories. I am sad, lonely and actually ill.

If "Alexandra's" man has no urge to marry her, after six years of such happiness as she describes, he may be encouraging the relationship for selfish gains. Or he may be simply too cowardly to make the break which he really wishes. It is easy to drift along in a situation of this kind until one is overtaken by emotional calamity the like of which I experienced, which leaves deep scars on a life.

I agree that suspicion, jealousy and "stampede" methods are to be abhorred, in our dealings with those we love. But I fear heartache and despair are in store for "Alexandra," if she holds naively to her present course of "trusting the man, being faithful to him and doing all in her power to make him happy"—while he takes her devotion and fidelity so for granted that he feels no need to make her his wife. Let us be realists, Miss Haworth, and admit that insistence upon marriage is the sole and true guarantee of a man's "good faith" toward a woman he professes to love.

RITA.

She Asks Guidance For Jobless Friend

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you please give the name, address, time of meeting, etc., of the "guidance clinic" for older, unemployed women—to which you referred in your column some months ago? I understand the purpose of the clinic is to "guide" older women into the types of occupation for which their experience and ability best suit them. MRS. T. P. W.

Occupational Council Is Doing Great Work

DEAR MRS. T. P. W.: The Women's Job Clinic, dedicated to the proposition of relieving unemployment among women 35 years of age and older, meets every Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in Room 105, Building D, on the George Washington University campus. (Building D is located on G Street, between Twentieth and Twenty-first Streets Northwest.)

Sponsored by the Women's Occupational Council of the District of Columbia, the clinic has been in operation more than five months, working under the leadership of Dr. Marjorie Shearon, president of the Council and Social Security Board expert on old age dependency. It's function is to acquaint older women (1) with the types of employment open to them, and (2) with the most appropriate and efficient job-getting techniques.

Since the first of the year, this column has been in receipt of weekly bulletins reporting the clinic's progress,—and the results achieved are truly astonishing. The latest bulletin to reach my desk is bristling with citations of jobs landed by various clinic clients;—really worthwhile jobs; in fields of science, art, government, commerce, etc. In the field of "group activities," one reads that a "get-acquainted dinner of 15 Government workers, or would-be workers," was held on a certain evening; and that "future dinner meetings will be held every two weeks at the homes of different members of the group."

By writing to Dr. Marjorie Shearon, care of Postoffice Box 4032, Chevy Chase, Md., no doubt you can have your own or your friend's name placed on the Occupational Council's mailing list, and thus be constantly informed on the clinic's activities. M. H.

Watch Stomach to Avoid Swayback

By Ida Jean Kain

SWAYBACK is the lay term given that exaggerated curve at the small of the back, technically called lordosis. And to compensate for this incurve there is always an outcurve of the abdominal wall.

It's a question as to which comes first, the protruding stomach or the incurve. But it's probably the former. When the muscles of the abdominal wall weaken and sag, the lower part of the spine is no longer held properly in place but is pulled sharply inward, causing sway-back. Fortunately, when you correct one fault, you correct the other. Specifically the correction consists in strengthening and retracting the abdominal muscles and in stretching the muscles of the lower back.

Normally, these muscles should hold your figure in beautiful alignment. You should sit, stand and walk with the lower abdominal muscles retracted, pulled up and in. If you did that, you would be constantly strengthing the muscles in the right position.

Start Off Easy

But if it feels more comfortable for you to slump than to sit up, it's only because you have consistently slumped. A few minutes of special exercise every day will gradually overcome this inclination and will give you a good posture along with a much better figure.

Start off easy, with a bit of discipline in sitting. Sit on the floor with the legs extended, and press the hips and the small of the back tight against the wall. The exercise is simply to sit in this position for two five-minute periods each day. After a time you should be able to sit in this same position without the support of the wall. Be sure that the lower abdominal muscles are pulled up, the back straight.

In sitting in a chair, that's the way to sit. For a time, shun easy chairs if they tempt you to slump and sit in the middle of your spine.

Muscles Weakened

Another good exercise is to lie on the back, head touching a wall, knees bent. Now bring the knees up and touch the wall. It's not easy, but it contracts the abdominal muscles and stretches the lower back muscles.

Capitalites to Attend Miss Andrews' Wedding

By Hope Ridings Miller

A NUMBER OF Capitalites will be catching an early morning train to New York on the morning of Saturday, April 26—the day that Frances Andrews, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews, is to become the bride of Benjamin F. Dillingham.

Invitations to the wedding, which will take place in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, have just been received here. The ceremony is set for 4:30 o'clock and later there is to be a reception in the ballroom of the Colony Club.

Hope Ridings Miller

Miss Andrews will have as her matron of honor Mrs. Myron Arms Wick, sister of the bridegroom; and Gaylord Dillingham, a student at Harvard Law School, will be best man for his brother.

Rear Admiral Andrews, who formerly was chief of the Bureau of Navigation, and his family lived in Washington until a few years ago when he became commander of the Scouting Force on the West Coast. During much of the time in which he served in the latter capacity, he and his wife and daughter made their home in Honolulu. Last month, however, the Andrews returned to this country and he took up his new duties as commandant of the Third Naval District and the Navy Yard in Brooklyn.

The prospective bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Dillingham, of Honolulu, sailed from Hawaii a few days ago and is expected to arrive in New York on April 15. A round of parties have been planned for him and his fiancee. Following their wedding trip, the young couple will make their home in Honolulu, where the Dillingham family has one of the most magnificent estates in the world.

IN TOWN YESTERDAY for a brief visit was the Countess of Listowel, Hungarian-born political writer and lecturer, who, on her first trip to America in 1936, came to Washington to spend several days. Yesterday, however, she was here only long enough to see a few friends, including Mme. Karl Wessel, wife of the Swedish Military Attache, whom she has known for a number of years.

Formerly the outstanding woman journalist in her native Hungary, Lady Listowel before her marriage was Judith Marffy-Manuano, daughter of a one-time Minister of Budapest. A member of a family in which the men have long been prominent in diplomatic and government circles, she heard national and international politics discussed so often she made up her mind to become a political writer. Despite parental objections, she got a job on a newspaper. Later, while continuing to write for it, she went to England to study at the London School of Economics. Shortly after she was graduated there, she married William Francis Hare, the fifth Earl of Listowel of Ireland. The two came over five years ago on a joint lecture tour. Several months ago she came over again to make a series of lectures. Her headquarters are in New York for the duration; but she may be back in Washington for a longer visit soon.

ODDMENTS OF INTEREST: Mrs. George Mesta will entertain at a small luncheon on Friday at the Sulgrave Club. . . . The Chip Roberts will leave for New York tomorrow and will fly from there on Saturday for Bermuda to spend Easter. Before they take off from Gotham, however, they'll see the circus with a group of friends. Returning to Washington on April 21, they'll then settle down to make plans for the party they'll be taking down to the Kentucky Derby. . . . Also organizing a Derby-going crowd are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McInnerney, of New York, who spent the past weekend here. Mrs. McInnerney, the former Mrs. Catherine Conner, of Washington, has entertained a party of friends at the turf classic for several years. Incidentally, at the cocktail party she and her husband gave at the Mayflower on Saturday, guests noted that her trimly tailored beige suit was set off with an exquisite string of pearls (I understand it's supposed to be one of the most beautifully matched in America) and a huge star sapphire ring. . . . Diplomatic hostesses and residential dowagers who are impressed by their own importance might find an eye-opener in an article entitled "Government Girls," in the current issue of Senator Arthur Capper's Household Magazine. The author is Florence Kiper Frank (Mrs. Jerome Frank), who sets out to prove (and does a good job of it) that the most important women in Washington are Government clerks—powers behind the thrones of the Federal Government, so to speak.

Wallace to Speak At Pan American Board Dinner

Vice President Henry A. Wallace will be the guest speaker at the luncheon which Nelson A. Rockefeller will give next Monday in honor of the governing board of the Pan American Union. The function will take place in the Hall of Heroes, at the Union, and will be in celebration of Pan American Day.

The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, who is vice chairman of the governing board, will introduce Mr. Wallace. Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Union, and Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director, will be the only guests other than member of the governing board. The board is composed of Secretary of State Cordell Hull and chiefs of missions of the Americas.

Mrs. R. S. Copeland Is Guest of Savoys

Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, who arrived several days ago, is stopping with Mr. and Mrs. Prew Savoy at their home on Twenty-ninth Street.

Mrs. Copeland, who is the widow of Senator Copeland, will leave on Friday for Suffern, N. Y.

MISS GRACE MARIE BOLAND

Several Parties for Couple Are Planned Here and in Richmond; Ceremony To Be Held at St. Matthew's Late in May

David William Boland, of Fall River, Mass., announces the engagement of his daughter, Grace Marie Boland, to Dr. Andre Christophe Simonpietri, of Washington and Richmond, Va.

Miss Boland was graduated from George Washington University and has completed other studies at Harvard University and the University of Mexico.

Dr. Simonpietri, who prepared at the Benedictine Military College in Richmond and at St. Charles College, Catonsville, Md., studied abroad for a number of years and obtained degrees from the Urban University and the Gregorian University in Rome. The title of Doctor of Philosophy was conferred upon him at the former. He is associated with the Division of International Conferences of the Department of State. He is also professor of European history at the Washington College of Foreign Service, and was formerly on the faculty of the University of Maryland.

Mr. Boland, well known in Massachusetts, is president of the Fall River News Co. Dr. Simonpietri's father, Auguste Simonpietri, of Richmond, and The Oaks, Novum, Va., retired some years ago from an honorary post in the diplomatic service of the French government.

Several parties have been planned for the young couple, in Richmond and Washington, before their wedding, which will take place in the latter part of May, at St. Matthew's Cathedral, in this city.

Belgian Envoy Will Entertain

The Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, will give a men's luncheon tomorrow for Camille Gutt, Minister of Finance and War in the exiled Belgian government in London. M. Gutt arrived in Washington last night and will spend several days here at the embassy.

His mission, he told New York reporters, is to consult with attorneys about the suit of the Belgian government against the Bank of France for $260,000,000, the amount that had been intrusted in gold to the French institution for safe keeping last spring. The Bank of France sent the gold to Dakar and after the collapse of France it was returned to France and found its way to the Germans. M. Gutt arrived in this country last Saturday on the Clipper.

Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, who is in the Argentine, is expected to join her husband here the first of next month.

Miss Rachel Hall, John Turney, Jr., To Be Wed in May

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Stearns Hall, of Worcester, Mass., and Nanking, China, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rachel Stearns Hall, to John Reid Turney, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Reid Turney, of Washington.

Miss Hall attended Ginling College in Nanking and was graduated from Pomona College in 1937. She received a master's degree from the Yale University School of Nursing in 1940. Her father is the regional secretary of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Mr. Turney was graduated summa cum laude from Princeton University in 1935 and from the Yale University School of Law in 1938. He is now a partner in the law firm of Turney, Rives & Turney, in Washington.

The marriage will take place in May, in New Brunswick, N. J.

Mrs. Abbey Flies Here for Wedding Of Miss Quirk

Mrs. Richard Abbey, wife of Lieut. Abbey, U. S. A., has flown here from Randolph Field, Tex., for the wedding of her sister, Miss Elizabeth C. Quirk, and Everette Roscoe Clarke, which will take place on Saturday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Marcus Quirk.

Last night Col. and Mrs. Evers Abbey entertained at a dinner party at the Broadmoor for the wedding party. Others who have entertained for the couple include Mr. and Mrs. Andrew W. Clarke, who gave a dinner last Sunday at the Belle Haven Country Club, and Mrs. J. Willard Nalls, who was hostess at a shower and tea. Mrs. Charles Holden and Mrs. Mary McCullough entertained at a shower and tea recently. Mrs. Malcolm Johnson and Mrs. Francis Murray were cohostesses at a tea last week in honor of Miss Quirk.

Miss Cruikshank Will Wed April 15

The marriage of Miss Helen Halsey Cruikshank and Seddon Bruce Sadtler will take place on April 15 and many parties are being planned in honor of the couple. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. Harrison Cruikshank, of Alexandria. Mr. Sadtler is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. John G. Sadtler, of Falls Church, Va.

On Easter Monday Rev. and Mrs. Sadtler will give a buffet supper for the bridal party at their home. Mrs. Cruikshank will give a tea at her home, 123 Duke Street, Alexandria, on Saturday in honor of the couple. Following the tea Mrs. Adrien F. Busick will entertain for the bridal party at a buffet supper at her home in Arlington, Va.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

MUCH OF THE coming and going in preparation for Easter seems to center around the younger school children now that their older brothers and sisters have gone back to boarding school. Washington draws them and their parents like a magnet, what with the National Gallery, Mount Vernon, and egg-rolling on the White House lawn. Down from Holmdel, N. J., are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Frelinghuysen, who have brought Mrs. Frelinghuysen's young son, Gordon Harrower, to see the sights of the Capital. The Frelinghuysens are staying at the Carlton.

Mrs. Emerson Smith, of Providence, R. I., and her son, Eric, have been staying with the George Howes in Georgetown while Eric did some prescribed sight-seeing with young Lisa and Linda Howe. Ten-year-old Lisa is in a dither of excitement because she is going to Florida next week and without benefit of grown-up supervision. Lisa and Margaret Anne Kilpatrick, who also boasts a decade in years, will be put on the train for Sarasota by their parents and removed from it by friends at their destination. Two weeks at the seashore is considered a mild pleasure by the youngsters, compared to the thrill of "traveling alone."

ARRIVED FROM warmer climes in time for a cool Easter in Washington is Mrs. Hutchinson Robbins, who has been in Caracas, Venezuela, seeing to the shipping of the Robbins' furniture. Mr. Robbins has been working in Caracas under the auspices of Nelson Rockfeller for the past year and recently was transferred to Washington. Mr. Robbins stayed with the Rockfellers and did house-hunting while his wife was winding up their affairs in Venezuela. When the furniture arrives Mr. and Mrs. Robbins will move into the house which they have taken in Silver Spring. Pretty Mrs. Robbins is conditioned to Washington for an emergency, and that by inheritance. The former Louise Auchincloss, she is a granddaughter of the late Col. Edward M. House, Woodrow Wilson's World War adviser.

WASHINGTON'S OWN Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins welcomed her daughter-in-law's arrival at the little house in Georgetown, which she has rented while making plans to build a home of her own.

The senior Mrs. Robbins is an old friend of Georgetown, having been among the first to "do over" one of its lovely old houses. That house is the one on Q Street, now owned by Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis.

HOLY WEEK not being a time for partying, I find space to quote part of a letter from an English boy to an American boy, which gives a very clear picture of England at war, seen through youthful eyes.

"I so well remember staying in London with you and your parents and seeing a film called 'A Slight Case of Murder.' Years ago, it seems. Do you remember our country home in Hampshire and our going to Navy Week at Portsmouth?

"Soon after you left I had an attack of infantile paralysis which kept me in hospital for nine months. As the hospital was near Oxford, I was able to take classes along with the treatments, and at the end of the March term I shall take exams which will qualify me for a 'War Degree.' I have made an almost perfect recovery so that I hope to go into the Navy when I am called up in April.

"Last summer, to be useful, I signed on as assistant purser on a merchant ship bound for Valparaiso. There was plenty of work of a kind quite new to me. On the way out we were attacked by a U-boat but got away. The voyage home was uneventful, except that we were the convoy in front of the Jervis Bay.

"In Colon I had seen a film of London under the 'blitz' and was very relieved when I found on my return that the damage was not really severe. I hope you don't think of London as a heap of ruins. It certainly isn't, and everything goes on as usual, buses, trams and everything.

"I wonder if you hear Winston Churchill's speeches. If so, you have a good idea of the feeling over here. Being English I, of course, feel certain of victory, and I hope Americans will feel so, too."

Mme. Fotitch Among Guests At Concert

By special vote of the Washington Committee for the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, the White House box at last night's concert was offered to the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch. Mrs. Roosevelt, who usually attends, was unable to be present.

Neither was Minister Fotitch, busy at his desk most of the evening. However, his wife arrived early, accompanied by Mme. Diamantopoulos, wife of the Greek envoy. Her husband, too, was kept away by work. The couple were joined in their box by Mme. Burya, wife of the Military Attache of the Yugoslav Legation.

A capacity audience—except for the boxes—filled Constitution Hall. The program was a performance of the Passion Music According to St. Matthew, with Leopold Stokowski conducting. Chorus and soloists were of the Westminster Choir School. The concert was the outstanding event of Holy Week in Washington.

Mrs. Miller Stays for Event

Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, chairman of the local committee of the Philadelphia Symphony, had postponed her annual visit to California just to hear the concert. She and Mr. Miller had with them in their box the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Bruggmann and Mrs. Arthur Woods. Mrs. Miller wore a dark colored velvet dinner dress with a matching coat.

The Soviet Envoy and Mme. Oumansky, the latter in a plum-colored dinner gown, occupied the Embassy box. Several members of the staff were with them. Nearby, in her box next to that of the White House, was Miss Mabel Boardman. As usual, she had a party of friends with her.

Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts were early arrivals, occupying seats in the orchestra. Also from the Supreme Court was Justice Harlan Fiske Stone with Mrs. Stone, who wore a mink cape over her black frock.

Mrs. Watson Occupies Box

The Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Baroness van Boetzelaer sat with friends, Baroness van Boetzelaer wearing a sapphire blue dress. Mrs. Edwin Watson was accompanied by Mrs. Raymond C. Miller and several others, among them Stanley Woodward. Mrs. Woodward is out of town. Only a few weeks ago Mrs. Watson was soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra at a Constitution Hall concert.

Others glimpsed last night were Miss Cecil Jones and James Mann; Miss Dorothea Villard with Richard Gambel, Mrs. Herbert Feis and Mrs. John Wiley, Mrs. Higginson Rogers and John Drier.

Among the hostesses at dinner before the concert was Mrs. Rees MacDuffie. Her guests were Gen. and Mrs. W. R. Smedberg, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mrs. Harry Clapp, Miss Jean Stier, Mrs. Walter Hilton and Miss Blanche Polkinhorn.

Chinese Envoy To Wed Couple

Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, will officiate at a Chinese wedding to be held at the embassy at 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon. The two principals are Miss Marjorie Li, daughter of a prominent Chinese merchant, and Alfred Wu, businessman, who is studying at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The prospective bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. C. Li, of Glen Cove, Long Island. Mr. Li is head of the Wah-Chang Trading Corporation.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

WITH ALL the forsythia and magnolia around town popping out overnight, the committee in charge of the forthcoming tour of Virginia gardens is making final plans for the project. This year the funds will be turned over to aid Great Britain.

DUDLEY HARMON

Such a distinguished list of hostesses is being rounded up for the tour that visitors probably will overlook the fabulous old boxwood and flowers to gawk at the women in charge. Grand Duchess Charlotte, of Luxemburg is expected to receive at Oatlands, the home of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, near Leesburg, Va. Another who will assist is, I hear, Mrs. Wendell Willkie. Hitherto a missing quantity at Washington functions, Mrs. Willkie was on hand at three large gatherings in the past week. She made an excellent impression on all who met her. Despite last summer's buildup as a "shy homebody," she proved that she could hold her own in any conversation.

COUNT Leone Fumasoni-Biondi, for many years Washington correspondent for the Italian news agency, Stefani, has resigned. In a few days he expects to leave on his first vacation in four years. Fumasoni-Biondi always has been exceedingly popular with Washington correspondents, who continued to like him personally, even after Italy entered the war. His chief interest outside his work has been his enormous collection of symphony records, which he plays for gatherings of friends in his apartment at the Mayflower.

THE CHILEAN Ambassador and Senora de Michels have as their guest at the embassy Dr. Eduardo Cruz Coke, Chilean Senator. A distinguished medico, he was formerly Minister of Public Health. He is accompanied by his wife and both speak perfect English. The Senator paid a call the day he arrived on our Surgeon General, Dr. Thomas Parran, and has been discussing plans for a chemists' congress to be held in Chile in the near future.

LATEST bachelor to be transferred from Washington is Jacob Bema of the State Department. He will leave in a week or so to be vice consul and third secretary in London. So far Mr. Beam does not know whether he will fly or take a boat.

In the past six years, Mr. Beam has had only a few months in a comparatively peaceful country. He served in Berlin until last autumn, making the trip across Europe to Lisbon in a sealed bus, after his transfer to Washington.

THE AMERICAN Red Cross has no stancher workers than the entire family of Brazilian Ambassador Martins. A few days after Senhora de Martins put on her dazzling fashion show, which netted several thousand dollars, her little daughter, Anne Marie, gave a puppet show with some friends. It was held at the embassy and the children raised $30. Among those who took part was Pola Fotitch, daughter of the Yugoslav Minister.

McAdoo Kin Is Engaged

Of wide interest here is the announcement by Mrs. McAdoo Taylor, of 410 Park Avenue, New York, of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Fernanda de Mohrenschildt, to Drayton Hastie, of Charleston, S. C., son of Mr. and Mrs. Norwood Hastie.

Miss de Mohrenschildt is the daughter of the late Ferdinand de Mohrenschildt, who at his death was Second Secretary of the Imperial Russian Embassy in Washington. She is a granddaughter of the late Senator William G. McAdoo, who served as Secretary of the Treasury under Woodrow Wilson.

The prospective bride was graduated from Miss Hewitt's Classes in New York and attended La Petite Ecole in Florence, Italy. She was introduced to society in Newport in August, 1938.

Mr Hastie was graduated from the Woodbury Forest School in Orange, Va., and from the University of North Carolina.

Miss Diana Rowland was hostess at a cocktail party yesterday at her home on Massachusetts Avenue. About 50 of her friends dropped in between the hours of 5 and 7.

Miss Buchanan To Be Married On Saturday

Wedding bells are on the calendar the coming weekend for Miss Rosalyn Buchanan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley Buchanan, who will become the bride of Stephen Van Cortlandt Schuyler at a noon ceremony on Saturday.

The Rev. James H. Taylor, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, will officiate at the Buchanan home, 6304 Bradley Boulevard. Relatives and a few close friends will witness the wedding. A breakfast and reception will follow.

The bride-elect will have as her only attendant a cousin, little Jean Evans, who will serve as flower girl. Mr. Schuyler, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence R. Schuyler, of Bloomfield, N. J., will have his father as best man.

A number of parties will swirl around Miss Buchanan the next few days. This evening she will be feted at a "spinsters' dinner" given by Miss Helen Diggs at the Spring Valley home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Diggs. Miss Achsah Dorsey will entertain at a luncheon for Miss Buchanan tomorrow at the Army-Navy Town Club, and tomorrow afternoon Miss Heinne Bowie will fete her at a cocktail party at the Mayflower Hotel.

Miss Edith Hood will be hostess at a luncheon honoring the bride-elect on Friday at the Columbia Country Club, and the wedding rehearsal will take place in the afternoon.

After a brief honeymoon trip Mr. Schuyler and his bride will make their home in Bloomfield, N. J. She will continue her course at the Fashion Academy in New York.

Miss Buchanan attended Holton Arms School and Chevy Chase Junior College and made her bow at a large tea here a few seasons ago. Mr. Schuyler, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, is now connected with Bamberger department store in Newark, N. J.

Halifax Predicts Revolt In Germany and Italy

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

The time will surely come when the German and Italian people, realizing how they have been misled, will turn against a party which by fraud, force and graft has placed itself in control of the state, Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, predicted yesterday in an address before the Women's National Press Club.

He spoke at the club's weekly luncheon, which was held in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel because of the large number of members and guests attending.

"Germans have no larger dose of original sin than the American or British people," said the Ambassador, "but they have been much less wise in choosing their leaders and initiating the military policy they pursue," Lord Halifax declared.

Hitler and Mussolini are finding they can choose the dates to start wars but not to end them—these are left to be decided by other people," he said. "Mussolini," he added, "has been obliged to accept help from his Axis partner that is undoing all the work of Italian liberators for years back."

Pointing out that, in their dependence on their propaganda machine and their military machine, the dictators fail to realize that no machine is as powerful as man and the mind of man, Lord Halifax asserted "this is a struggle of great moral causes, to be won by the operation of great moral forces."

Earlier, he had called attention to the fact that Greece and Yugoslavia accepted the challenge of the German aggressor because "they were not slow to recognize that the struggle is a clash of philosophies in which there can be no compromise."

He referred to Hitler's army order, published Monday, as one of the most revealing documents of the war, because of its showing Hitler's need for self-justification before his own people. There was a trace of sarcasm as he spoke of Hitler's reference to Greece and Yugoslavia "as endangering German people, property and peace that Germany was obliged to take stern action in self-defense"—"innocent, high-souled Germany, compelled to take action that hurts Germany more than it does other people," said the Ambassador.

"I can imagine an obedient, noncritical German forgetting the size of the other countries as well as the fact that Germany has made military preparations during the last eight years," he observed.

"I should have more respect for Germany if it gave up the attempt to paint its theft and murder as anything but black deeds against society," he added.

Replying to a qestion as to whether he hoped for a League of Nations after the war with the United Stats participating, Lord Halifax replied that, unless the United States and Great Britain could themselves remain close, it was not likely they could come to agreement with anyone else."

Among the guests at the head table introduced by Mrs. J. Fred Essary, club president, were the Minister from the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, the Minister from Australia and Mrs. Richard G. Casey, Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General; Sir Evelyn Wrench and Mrs. Wrench, Prof. Edward L. Corwin, head of the department of constitutional law at Princeton University, former Ambassador Alanson B. Houghton, Mrs. Arthur Wood, chairman of the Virginia Garden Tours for Bundles for Britain, and Miss Nancy Strong, cherry blossom queen.

City Club Hears Of Indian Work

Indian traditions, customs and languages are being preserved to the various tribes throughout the country through the instruction given in Government schools on the different reservations, according to Miss Carrie Lyford, who spoke at the book hour of the Women's City Club yesterday.

Miss Lyford, specialist in education for the Office of Indian Affairs, has traveled for several years as educational supervisor, visiting the reservations and facilitating the cooperation between the Indian Office here and the Government schools which serve 69,000 Indian boys and girls.

Bi-lingual primers have been published for the schools on the Navajo reservations in Arizona, she said. The children are taught English so they will be able to converse with outsiders and are given reading lessons and other instruction in their own Navajo tongue, so they can use it at home and it will be preserved to them as a people. There has been difficulty in negotiating with the Navajos, who are large sheep raisers, because so few of them understand English, she said.

The stories in the readers are those of their home life in the hogans in which they live, of their sheep herding and their silver work and weaving. Most of the books have been written by white teachers who have worked on the reservations many years, but many of the illustrations are by young Indian artists, said Miss Lyford.

Woodridge Book Club Celebrates 15th Anniversary

The Woodridge Book Club yesterday celebrated its fifteenth anniversary with a luncheon for 125 members and guests at the Highlands. Mrs. Leslie Clark Stevens, who was in London before the war and after it started, was guest speaker, talking on "Glimpses of Women of the World."

Among the honor guests were Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, education chairman of the federation, who has been indorsed by the W. C. T. U. as candidate for president, to succeed Mrs. Daniel.

Mrs. Charles H. Pierce, president of the club, presided and Mrs. E. M. Nelson was chairman of the luncheon committee. A patriotic theme was carried out in the decorations with small flags on the programs and the use of red, white and blue candles.

National C.A.R. Slate Named

Mrs. Louise Mosely Heaton of Clarksdale, Miss., headed the slate of officers for the National Society, Children of the American Revolution, presented yesterday at the national board meeting by the nominating committee, of which Mrs. Thaddeus M. Jones is chairman. She has been nominated for national president to succeed Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, of Washington.

Others on the national slate are Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, of Washington, for recording secretary; Mrs. Carl H. Iroux, of Washington, organizing secretary; Mrs. B. Harrison Lingo, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ray E. Brown, treasurer; Mrs. Catherine B. Strong, registrar; Mrs. Harry Melville Howard, historian; Mrs. Edmund Burke Ball, librarian-curator, and Mrs. Henry Bourne Joy, chaplain.

MRS FRANK H. TOWNER, with the several members of the house committee of the Fiftieth Continental Congress of the D. A. R., of which she is chairman, is working on last minute details for the conclave. This committee has charge of registration of delegates, the boxes, badges, concessions and various bureaus in Constitution and Memorial Continental Halls and also arranges the sight-seeing tours for the D. A. R.'s and often for members of their families who come to the Capital with them.

Among the Washington members of the committee are Miss Mary C. Oursler, who this season will complete 25 years of continuous service in charge of the card index register, and Mrs. Samuel B. Woodbridge, in charge of the badges, who has been a member of the committee for 27 years.

SALE GOES ON—The Easter Card Shop for British Relief has been moved from the Piccadilly Arcade back to 1018 Connecticut Avenue, where it will remain open until Easter. Already $800 has been raised by the sale of cards, boxes and toy geese—a sum which will keep 600 children safely outside of the air raid district for a week.

Miss Winslow's cousin, Hoffman Philip, former Ambassador to Chile and, in 1909, this country's first Minister to Abyssinia, contributed to the golden egg "yolk" in the window of the shop, a ring of unalloyed gold, he got at the time he was there. It is of the same gold then used there as currency. Miss Winslow plans to have it appraised and expects it to bring more than its weight in gold from some collector.

PLAN MAY PARTY—The annual May Party to be held at the Washington Home for Foundlings has been set for Friday afternoon, May 2, by the Peirce Guild, which sponsors it.

Plans for it were discussed at a meeting of the guild last Friday at the Chevy Chase Club, with Mrs. Harry H. Semmes as hostess.

This annual event is always looked forward to by lovers of children as an opportunity for them to see one of the oldest non-sectarian charities in Washington and which has been sponsored by the Peirce Guild for nearly half a century. Mrs. Cloyd Marvin, president of the guild will head the reception committee. Mrs. William Aspinwall will be in charge of the fancy work table. Mrs. Semmes will make card table reservations. Mrs. Hugh Saum and her assistants will disperse the cookies, candies, etc., while Mrs. Carl A. Droop will preside in the tea room. Mrs. A. H. Semmes is in charge of invitation cards and Mrs. William Hamilton Bayly is in charge of publicity.

MEMORY CLUB—Miss Eva Bullard will entertain the National Mothers Memory Club in her apartment, Chastleton Hotel, 1701 Sixteenth Street Northwest tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, assisted by Mrs. Charles L. Wade. The president of the club, Mrs. William H. Wagner, will preside.

Mrs. Tonnis Holzberg, chairman of entertainment, has arranged an interesting program with papers by several of the club members, telling about famous mothers, beginning with the mothers of our Presidents. The story of the mother of John Adams will be given by Mrs. Daisie B. Mulford; of Thomas Jefferson, by Mrs. L. D. Hawkins; of James Madison by Mrs. David Snyder; Mrs. Frank Litchert will talk about the mother of James Monroe.

Next year the club will continue the study of prominent mothers and take up book reviews under the direction of Mrs. Holzberg.

Texan's 50-Foot Mural Chosen for War Building

After two days of judging, a five-man blue ribbon jury decided yesterday that the main mural in the new War Department building is to be painted by a native Texan who is on the Carnegie Tech faculty.

He is Kindred McLeary, 40, and his design was unanimously selected from among 200 anonymous entries in the competition.

The award was announced at a luncheon in the offices of the government's Section of Fine Arts, at which Edward Bruce, chief, was host. McLeary wasn't there, having been notified of the choice of his design only a few minutes earlier.

Said to be the largest single panel ever to be undertaken under supervision of the Federal Government's art unit, the painter's completed work will be 50 feet long and 12 feet high. It will be executed directly on the wall.

At either end of the mural McLeary depicts the horrors of war—guns blazing, incendiary bombs falling, soldiers in action, fallen civilians. The central portion is devoted to the virtues of a peacetime democracy.

Boardman Robinson, noted painter, of Colorado Springs, Colo., was chairman of the jury. Other members were Edgar Britton, of Chicago, and Gifford Beal, of New York City, both painters, and the War building's architects, Gilbert S. Underwood and William Dewey Foster.

Cherry Blossom Court Rehearses for Festival

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Beneath gold-plated chandeliers which looked nothing like Cherry Blossom boughs, a mythical barge nosed gently across the waxed floor of a room in the Willard Hotel yesterday, and "docked" against a row of chairs.

From the "barge" stepped 14 pretty girls—and a rather flustered Marine Corps officer.

It was the first rehearsal for Queen Nancy Strong and her Cherry Blossom court. The only water near at hand was in a glass pitcher on the windowsill and the nearest thing to a pink blossom was a "fire exit" light.

Even the bright spring sunlight, which everyone hopes will provide background for the annual festival Saturday and Sunday, was shut out by tightly-closed venetian blinds.

But everyone seemed to have a good time despite the lack of atmosphere—except, perhaps, the Marine officer (Capt. S. F. Zeiler, of the Marine Barracks), who got there by mistake.

He thought all the princesses' escorts were supposed to be on hand for the rehearsal, but he got his dates mixed. However, he learned not only how to escort one princess, but 14 others also. And he gave the impression that an intricate brigade drill was duck soup in comparison.

Nevertheless, he "landed" with the girls at least a dozen times and took the long march from the "sea wall" to the "throne." He kept the situation well in hand and was complimented by Directress Ethyl Manning just before dashing for the nearest exit when things were over.

During the practice, Queen Nancy was "crowned" also at least a dozen times and couldn't keep her eyes from glancing upwards when the little "crown" that wasn't there wasn't placed on her head. (Senator Overton, of the Senate District Committee will do the crowning Saturday.)

On both Saturday and Sunday, it was explained, the festival will begin at 2:30 p. m. at Tidal Basin. The same routine will be followed each day—except the actual crowning will be eliminated Sunday.

Queen Nancy hinted yesterday that they may have to carry her from the barge to her throne unless there soon comes a halt to the series of social functions honoring her coronation.

"I'm wilted already," she said, "and I haven't even burst into full blossom!"

In addition to the Queen and her court, 35 other girls will form a background for the throne—"They'll form a floral arch with Cherry Blossoms," explained Miss Manning.

Each princess will be accompanied to the ceremonies by a uniformed Army, Navy or Marine Corps officer. Capt. Chester Hammond, of the Munitions Building, will be Queen Nancy's escort.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Khuttz

Ashurst and King Angling for Jobs

A couple of lame ducks—former Senator Henry Ashurst of Arizona and former Senator William H. King of Utah — are angling for jobs in the Justice Department.

Immigration and Naturalization Service is planning a shake-up of its Board of Immigration Appeals, and friends of Ashurst are pushing him for the $7,000 job of board chairman. It's reported that King is after a job in Thurman Arnold's trust-busting division. Ashurst appears certain to land on the Justice pay roll, either on the immigration board or as a special attorney, but the status of King is uncertain. King opposed many New Deal domestic reforms while Ashurst usually voted with the Administration.

It's rumored at Justice that Joseph Fanelli, assistant general counsel of Railroad Retirement Board, will be appointed either chairman or a member of the new immigration board. Ralph Seward, the present chairman, will be promoted to general counsel of Immigration and Naturalization Service, it's said. The service has never had a legal division of its own and one would be set up under Seward, an authority on immigration laws.

Justice attorneys have drawn up a proposed executive order which would make effective the Frankfurter plan for the selection of Federal attorneys, if the President signed it. The order provides that the Solicitor General be the permanent chairman of the committee on attorneys which would recruit and select attorneys under the Frankfurter plan. The plan also provides for an "ungraded" register of attorneys, which would permit an agency to select any one attorney on the register.

A score of officials have worked on the executive orders that would make the Ramspeck bill effective by extending civil service to 125,000 additional Federal jobs. These include Newman A. Townsend and Francis M. Shea, of the Justice Department; Charles E. Rhetts, associate solicitor of the Labor Department; William Youngman, general counsel of the Federal Power Commission; Oscar Cox, Treasury attorney; Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed, who was chairman of the committee that recommended that lawyers be brought under merit, and James Rowe, administrative assistant to the President.

U. S. Needs Engineers

Friends of George M. Brennan, Intermediate Credit Commissioner, are booming him for the vacancy on the Federal Reserve Board to succeed Chester Davis. But Brennan's boss, A. G. Black, governor of Farm Credit Administration, also wants the job and Black is understood to have the inside track.

Uncle Sam needs engineers and architects. Broad exams for both professions were announced yesterday by the Civil Service Commission. Requirements have been relaxed by the commission in an effort to build up adequate registers to meet demands. Salaries for engineers range from $2,600 to $5,600. The exam covers all branches of engineering except chemical, metallurgical, marine and naval architecture. Engineers are particularly needed in these fields: Aeronautical, agricultural, construction, heating and ventilating, mechanical, ordnance, radio, safety, sanitary, structural and welding. Architects will be paid from $2,000 to $4,600. The exam has three options, design, specifications and estimating.

Civil Service has set up a new register for junior engineers. It has 3,562 eligibles and already every person available for a job has been certified by the commission. Civil engineers had the highest number of eligibles with 1,122; mechanical with 687, and electrical with 642, and agricultural with 146 followed in order . . . Duke Stroble of G. A. O., and Eddie McGinnis of the War Department, are running a Government employes Easter tour to New York over the weekend on the B. & O.

Well, What Do You Think?

An auto moving along R Street Northwest and another proceeding on Nineteenth crashed yesterday. The drivers politely surveyed the damage, and then seeking to place the responsibility, one asked: "Did anyone see the accident? How did it happen?

A 12-year-old boy responded. "Neither of you stopped soon enough," he said.

All in the Line of Duty

The Cleaners and Laundry Workers Union, Local 188-B, yesterday expressed the hope it will not receive complaints from the wives of three members to the effect that their husbands are spending too much time in union activity.

The three men, it was explained, have been elected delegates to the Women's Trade Union League.

4 Citizen Units Refuse to Join City Assembly

Four citizens' associations meeting last night declined to join the Municipal Assembly, accusing that body of overlapping the functions of the Federation of Citizens Associations and of causing an "unnecessary division in civic solidarity."

The Benning association said the white and colored federations represented all citizen group of the District and a "parallel civic organization" can serve no useful purpose.

Benning citizens also voted support of the Overton-Hunter resolution increasing the Federal appropriation to the District and named a committee headed by Robert S. Clements to get action on adjustment of the new traffic light at Benning Road and Minnesota Avenue Northeast.

Thirty-three new residents of the Benning area were presented by Mrs. Howard L. Wait and accepted by the body as members.

Stanton Park

The Stanton Park Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution opposing any regulations permitting the sale of liquor within 600 feet of "adjacent school property."

The association met at the Peabody School. Members protested that present regulations measure the distance from school to store as the distance from entrance to entrance. They asked that the distance be measured from the nearest part of the school property to the entrance to the liquor store.

Other resolutions called for "necessary repairs" to the Peabody-Hilton and Carbery Schools. They also urged the surfacing of the Peabody-Hilton playground.

Summit Park

Summit Park Citizens Association last night asked resurfacing of Bangor, Camden and Austin Streets Southeast and urged cutting through of Southern Avenue from Suitland Road to Bowen Road.

Members urged continuation of the avenue to provide a direct downtown route, alternate to Alabama which is soon to be blocked by repair work.

The association went on record in opposition to the municipal council which it was asserted would "merely stir up ill feeling" and duplicate activities of the Federation of Citizens Associations. Citizens also voted to ask city officials to furnish information on construction work at a new school being built at Thirty-sixth Place and Alabama Avenue Southeast.

Logan-Thomas Circle

Increased appropriations for the education of handicapped children were urged last night by the Logan-Thomas Circle Citizens Association, meeting at 1120 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

The citizens also named a committee to investigate the new Municipal Assembly and report on its alleged attempts to supplant the position of the Federation of Citizens Associations. Committee members are H. M. Fulton, F. M. Thompson and K. C. Robbins.

Appointed as members of a nominating committee to present candidates for the association's annual election next month were Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Baker and Fred Haig. Mrs. Frank M. Thompson presided.

2 Bandits Tie Store Manager, Get $40

Two armed thugs last night entered a food store at 35 N Street Northwest, tied up Sam Mushinsky, manager, warned his wife not to call for help until they were gone, and escaped with $40.

Civitan Club Honors 10 D. C. Students

"The world is closer now to peace than it has ever been in history—because war is no longer glorified and can be seen in its true light," the Rev. John Rustin, of Mount Vernon Methodist Episcopal Church, said last night in a broadcast talk at the Civitan Club's twentieth anniversary dinner.

Speaking after ten District high school students had been awarded gold keys for "outstanding citizenship," the Rev. Mr. Rustin said that the present world conflict gives youth a world viewpoint which will result in "unprecedented accomplishments."

"Most of the real progress that has been made in the past has come in the midst of conflict," he asserted.

Students who were honored with citizenship awards were: John Harrison, Western High School; Mark Leiserson, Woodrow Wilson High; David Jenkins, Anacostia High; John Caswell, Central High; James K. Kavanagh, Calvin Coolidge High; James E. Huddleston, Eastern High; Joseph M. Kennedy, Gonzaga High; John Fondahl, McKinley High; Robert J. Millar, Roosevelt High, and William A. Steele, of St. John's.

Honored guests at the Civitan dinner, held in the Mayflower Hotel, included Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Miss Maude E. Aiton, Dr. Allan Davis, Dr. Chester W. Holmes and Mrs. M. L. Kyle.

Martin W. Hysong, Civitan Club head, presided.

Federal Employes Honor Miss McNally

In 1908 employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing made as little as $1.25 per day. So Miss Gertrude McNally founded a union lodge.

Miss McNally

Last night at the Willard Hotel, her fellow members of Federal Employe's Lodge No. 105 of the National Federation of Federal Employes, reelected her secretary for the thirty-third time and gave her a bouquet of 33 red roses.

Miss McNally, now national secretary-treasurer of the union, is no longer an employe of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving. But she is happy about the changes that have been made. She pointed out last night such improvements since 1908 as a minimum wage of $4.40 per day, which she attributes to the work of the union.

Miss McNally was installed in office along with other officers elected at a previous meeting.

Senate Unit To Study D. C. Government

Changes in the District government recommended by a Brookings Institution expert shortly will be laid before a Senate subcommittee in Capitol Hill's first definite attack on the District suffrage issue at this session of Congress.

The move was, announced last night by Senator Pat McCarran, chairman of the Judiciary subcommittee on the Capper-Summers resolution. The bill would authorize Congress to give the District representation in the House, Senate and Electoral College and to delegate governmental powers to Capital residents.

McCarran disclosed that the subcommittee would open hearings on the resolution soon, perhaps as early as next week, and that the first witness would be Dr. Lawrence F. Schmeckebier, a member of the Brookings staff, who in 1929 published a study recommending a city manager - commission government for the District.

To Review Past Systems

Characterizing Dr. Schmeckebier as an astute student of the District government, McCarran said the expert would be asked to give the subcommittee "information as to whether a constitutional amendment is necessary to give the District a measure of self-government and, if it is necessary, to what extent and why."

Dr. Schmeckebier, McCarran added, also will be asked his opinion on "what kind of government could be established for Washington without constitutional amendment."

Before giving the subcommittee his recommendations, however, Dr. Schmeckebier has advised McCarran that he will be prepared to provide a historical outline of the various forms of District government of the past. McCarran said Dr. Schmeckebier would be asked to show the weaknesses as well as the desirable features of the old territorial government and other political stages by which the District arrived at its present form of government.

Public to Testify

After Dr. Schmeckebier testifies, McCarran announced, the hearings will be thrown open to the public "so long as they have suggestions or factual statements to make and so long as they address themselves strictly to the subject."

McCarran said he would ask civic groups and other organizations wishing to submit testimony to hold meetings in advance of the hearing and to designate spokesmen. He said he hoped in this manner to avoid duplication of testimony."

First Lady Urges Play Facilities

Broadcasts Support Of Plan Calling For Federal Workers Recreation Center

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt last night said that the proposal of the Federal Employes Council to construct a central recreational center for Government workers a "very good idea."

Earlier, the President's District Recreation Committee approved a proposed bill to create a nine-member Recreation Board for Washington.

Mrs. Roosevelt spoke over Station WJSV on the "Your Government This Week" program, sponsored by the Federal Employes Council. She was interviewed by Miss Mary E. Switzer, assistant to the Federal Security Administrator.

Thinks It "Good Idea"

Told about the council's campaign for the recreational center, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"I believe that is a very good idea. Although I am not an expert on recreational facilities, they must be lagging behind the very rapid growth of population here in Washington."

Archie C. Edwards, chairman of the council, told the First Lady that Washington, despite its high average income, is far behind cities of comparable size in facilities for baseball, tennis, handball courts and wading pools. It leads only in golf courses and riding paths, he said.

Mrs. Roosevelt urged the consideration of the recreational problem as part of the defense program.

Was Created in 1935

The President's Recreation Committee, created in 1935, to promote a unified recreation system here, agreed on the make-up of the proposed board as already approved by the board of education. The committee recommended the following membership:

A member of the Board of Commissioners to be designated by them, a representative of the Board of Education, a member to be designated by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the superintendent of National Capital Parks, ex officio and five citizen members to be appointed by the Commissioners.

If the bill is adopted by Congress, this board, effective July 1, will supplant the present joint standing handling of District recreation facilities by the Board of Education and the Commissioners. If the bill goes through, the new board would take office July 1.

The five citizen members would serve five-year terms on the board, except for the original appointments which would be staggered, for one, two, three, four and five years.

$500 in Dope Seized In Chinatown Raid

Narcotics squad detectives and Federal agents raided a Chinatown room early today, seized $500 to $700 worth of opium and it derivative, yen shee, and arrested two Chinese.

Charged with violating the Harrison Narcotics Act were Leo S. Lee, 21, of 1551 Ninth Street Northwest, and Lee Tim, 48, of Philadelphia. The raid on a building at 603 H Street Northwest, was led by Detective Sergt. Robert Bryant, chief of the narcotics squad.

Capital News In Brief

Radio Man, Fighting Fire, Hurt in Fall Through Skylight

James McGrath, 38, announcer and production official for Station WINX, was injured seriously last night when he fell through a second floor skylight while extinguishing a minor fire on the roof of the station, Eighth and I Streets Northwest.

The accident occurred after McGrath, of 1811 Lamont Street Northwest, had noticed a piece of blazing paper on the roof and had volunteered to put out the flames.

He climbed through a window and stamped out the blaze. Then, turning back to reenter the building, he slipped and plunged 20 feet through the open skylight opening to a concrete ventilator shaft.

Firemen cut a hole through the wall to rescue the radioman.

He was rushed to Emergency Hospital where he was treated for several fractured ribs, body abrasions, and possible internal injuries. Physicians called his condition fair.

Police Sergeant Dawn Is Called by Army

DAWN

A reserve officer, Dawn received orders Saturday to report to Camp Lee, Va., for active service with a field artillery unit. He requested a year's leave of absence from the Police Department. Father of five children ranging in ages from 9 to 18, Dawn was appointed to the police force in August, 1939, and was made a sergeant in August last year. He fought in the World War and has been an Army Reservist since 1922. He lives with his family at 530 Madison Street Northwest.

District to Spruce Up Shepherd's Statue

Covered with verdigris, the familiar figure of Gov. Alexander R. Shepherd, which graces the lawn in front of the District Building will be brightened up a bit and moved to an appropriate spot near the new Municipal Center, it was learned yesterday.

Commissioner John Russell Young said the move followed a request by a prominent citizen who attended the unveiling of the statue May 13, 1909.

Shepherd was appointed Governor of the District in 1873, having prior to that time served in the Levy Court, on the Board of Aldermen and with the Board of Charities.

Commissioner Hazen Enters Florida Hospital

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen has entered the Morrell Memorial Hospital in Lakeland, Fla., where he was vacationing, it was disclosed yesterday by Commissioner John Russell Young.

Hazen wrote that he suffered an old ailment and entered the hospital on the advice of a Lakeland physician who advised against the return trip home at this time. Commissioner Young said he understood Hazen's condition is not serious. The Commissioner left Washington ten days ago and will remain in the Florida hospital about two weeks.

Woman's Screams Frighten Intruder

Mrs. Mae Inman, 49, of 1456 V Street Northwest, awoke early yesterday morning to discover a colored man climbing into the window of her first floor apartment. The intruder fled when she screamed.

MISS INMAN

An hour later police arrested a suspect, but Mrs. Inman failed to identify him in a line-up last night. The suspect, 23, was picked up at North Capitol Street and Florida Avenue. Police said he was carrying a knife and that his knuckles were bleeding.

Four-Day Forecast Is for Mild Weather

Fair today, cloudy tomorrow, and continued mild temperatures is the outlook offered by the weatherman last night. But the four-day forecast sees rain for Thursday. The four-day forecast for Washington and the Middle Atlantic States follows:

Little or no rain over New York State and light to moderate rains Pennsylvania southward Thursday, beginning over the southern Appalachian region and southern Virginia Wednesday and ending most sections Thursday night. Temperatures above normal Wednesday and Thursday becoming cooler Friday. Somewhat below normal northern sections Saturday.

Bar Favors Juvenile Mental Clinic

Association Urges Addition of Ten Probation Officers At Child's Court

The Bar Association of the District of Columbia last night went on record in favor of establishment of a psychiatric clinic at the Juvenile Court and the addition of ten probation officers.

The association accepted a report brought in by Michael J. Lane from a committee studying Juvenile Court needs. "We believe the Commissioners of the District should be empowered to call upon the U. S. Public Health Service to furnish medical services and advice for the benefit of this clinic without any cost to the District," the report stated.

A proposed bill to that effect was brought in with the report.

The report pointed out that each of the five probation officers of the court average a case load of about 240 defendants, according to recent figures.

The issue of more thorough character investigation of candidates for admission to the bar was raised in a report presented by John Pratt, of the committee on legal education, Junior Bar Section of the association.

Stating that the present system of investigating moral character is "woefully inadequate" through no fault of the court's admissions committee, the report made several recommendations. Under them, a candidate upon enrollment in law school would be required to register with the committee and would be assigned to the supervision of an attorney in active practice, so investigation of character could extend over a longer period.

The Junior Bar Section sponsored the meeting, at which Col. F. Granville Munson, of the Judge Advocate General's Department, U. S. A., spoke on certain technicalities in military law and justice. William Roy Vallance, secretary-general, Inter-American Bar Association, reported on its conference in Havana last month.

The following were named last night on the committee to bring in nominations for officers of the association: Maurice D. Rosenberg, Michael Lane, Paul Hannah, George P. Hoover, Sefton Darr, Harryman Dorsey, Myron Ehrlich.

The meeting was held at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Warners Make Monkey Of Employment Problem

But Feeding Their Staff Is Not So Easy; Miss Bannerman Wastes Some Money; This, That and the Other About the Theater

IF AN UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM still exists in these industrially disjointed United States, it can hardly be left in one of those surreptitious baskets on the doorsteps of the Warner Brothers.

BELL

This week, if I have my dates on straight, will go down in the Warner studio books as the biggest in the company's production history, according to a modest pronouncement by Jack L. Warner, vice president of the company in charge of production. A total of 5,027 workers, engaged in shooting eight current features, preparing 11 for early production and 16 more for future release, appears on the studio's payroll for the week, breaking the former high record of 4,874 employes.

The Warner payroll for this week, if it were broken down—and it hereby seems to be—would reveal 4,300 men and women on the general and mechanical staffs, 88 stars and featured players under contract, 24 off-the-lot players working on one-picture deals, 465 extras, the majority working on a night club set for "Manpower," costarring Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Dietrich and George Raft, and 150 players and workers at the Naval Air Base in San Diego, who are filming "Dive Bomber," costarring Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray.

The other six productions currently before the Warner cameras are "Sergeant York," starring Gary Cooper and Joan Leslie; "Bad Man of Missouri," with Dennis Morgan, Wayne Morris, Jane Wyman and Arthur Kennedy; "The Gentle People," starring Ida Lupino, John Garfield and Thomas Mitchell; "The Flight Patrol," with James Stephenson and Ronald Reagan; "Underground," with Jeffrey Lynn, Kaaren Verne, Philip Dorn and Mona Maris, and "Passage from Hongkong," with Lucile Fairbanks and Keith Douglas. There would seem to be time enough to take up the rest of the pretentious program at some future date.

From the standpoint of national economic stability, this top record of Warner employment may sound a clarion call—whatever that is— to emulation by other major industrial organizations, but it still has its headaches for the Freres at the head of the company. For instance, there is the minor manner of feeding all those workers. Five thousand and twenty-seven inner men to be catered to three or four times a day is by way of being a bit of an item. Four luncheon shifts will give you a sketchy idea.

Miss Bannerman Receives a Shock

Drama is not always on the stage. Take the case of Margaret Bannerman, who is making her Washington stage debut in John Golden's production of "Theatre," starring Cornelia Otis Skinner and opening in the National Theater next Monday night, for instance. Miss Bannerman, comparatively new to our shores, since arrival in America on this visit, has been combing the souvenir, bric-a-brac and antique shops for items typical of America to send back to her lovely apartment in Park Lane, London. Having acquired quite a sizable collection, she began packaging her new possessions for overseas shipment. Returning to her New York hotel from a rehearsal of "Theatre," she found a message from London awaiting her. It told her that two weeks ago her apartment was burned to the ground by an incendiary bomb.

Florence Eldridge, coming to the National with her famous husband, Fredric March, the week of April 21, in the Theater Guild's production of "Hope of a Harvest," has been released by the Guild for a broadcast on the subject of Clare Tree Major's Children's Theater of New York, tomorrow morning over the National Farm and Home Hour. Miss Eldridge will call attention especially to "Hans Brinker and the Silver Skates," which will close the Children's Theater's current season in Washington, at the National Theater on Saturday morning. "Hope of a Harvest," incidentally has had an auspicious Boston opening and will come to the National direct from its two weeks in the Hub.

Some New Tunes for "Cook Book"

"Cook Book," the musical biography of that insane Indianian, Joe Cook, being steamed up by Father Hartke and his Harlequins out at Catholic University, will be set off by some very sprightly music. Not only will it embody many of the song hits from Joe's long list of musical comedy successes, but also will find room for some new tunes dreamed out of the nowhere by Frank Spitzig, undergraduate, and Betty Healy and Bill Coleman, graduate students. Music drawn from the former Cook hits will include numbers by Cole Porter and George Gershwin. Of the localites' original creations, Jo Lombardi, conductor of the Earle Theater Orchestra, says: "Spitzig's love songs represent the freshest approach to a romantic style I have heard in years." And Jo knows his way around in music.

Spring-Is-in-the-Air Note

If you are smart, you will not miss "Blossom Time," either down around the Tidal Basin or at the National Theater.

BETTE DAVIS AND GEORGE BRENT
as they will be seen in the costellar roles of the Warner Brothers production of "The Great Lie," opening Friday on the screen at the Earle Theater. This is the subject that only a few days ago attracted a large junket to Littleton, N. H., for its world premiere—a reportedly luminous occasion upon which Miss Davis acted as gracious hostess to a horde of visiting firemen and flaming feminine commentators

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 8 (INS).—Gene Tierney, named by the Harvard Lampoon as the worst prospect of 1940, has been chosen to play the coveted woman's role in "Belle Starr." If the Harvard boys continue to pick out such winners as Gene, our Hollywood gals will be offering the students money to get on their "defeni d" list. Forty-seven tests were made, and some of them of important stars, until Darryl Zanuck saw a test of Gene and chose her.

PARSONS

"Mr. Wooky," a war comedy, has sent M-G-M to Broadway. Frederick Hazlitt Brennan refused to sell the movie rights to his play until it had been put on the Broadway stage. So M-G-M is producing it.

Vital Rosalind Russell, who plays a business woman or newspaper reporter so believably, is Warner's choice for the secretary in "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Of course there is a little matter of borrowing her from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, but since she has been loaned to Columbia, Universal and so many other studios, it seems more than likely we shall find Roz in the role. Bette Davis had asked to play the secretary, but her schedule is so heavy her request will not be granted.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Ronald Howard, son of the Leslie Howards, married Patricia Horsman in London, March 22. He is in the British navy; congratulations to Walter Compton, Republic publicity director, on the arrival of a son born this morning; Eddie Moran, Universal writer, and Janet Lawson will do an altar march in July; the Larry Crosbys, he is Bing's brother, have reconciled; Big Boy Williams has returned to his first love, Hilda Title, actress of Western roles; Anita Louise, on a personal appearance tour, has been suffering with a badly infected hand caused by a hangnail.

Ray Milland and his missus leaving tomorrow for New York on a two weeks vacation; Joe Pasternak is nursing a bad sore throat; Tom Brown at Charlie Foy's with Dorothy O'Kelly, of Chicago, who is telling friends she will be the next Mrs. Brown; Junior Laemmle and June Duprez, a Hollywood Tropics twosome; Claudette Colbert leaves for New York in a few days for a session of theatergoing and shopping. Her husband, now in the Naval Reserve, will be kept too busy with Uncle Sam to accompany her; Bob Taylor lunches nearly every day with Barbara Stanwyck on the Paramount lot.

Ken Murray has fallen hard for Kay Harris, the new "Tillie, the Toiler." He gave a party Saturday night to introduce her to his friends and among those who answered his call were the Bing Crosbys, the Bob Hopes, Lew Ayres.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

'Theatre,' Glen Echo Opening Events of Impending Week

"THEATRE." Cornelia Otis Skinner deserts her mono-dramas to star in W. Somerset Maugham's and Guy Bolton's dramatization of Maugham's novel, "Theatre," opening a pre-New York engagement at the National Theater Monday evening. John Golden is presenting the comedy, which in its book form concerned the amours, tantrums but genuine theatrical power of London's most celebrated actress. Topping Miss Skinner's supporting cast will be Arthur Margetson, long a London leading man; Margaret Bannerman, a musical-comedy favorite on the West End, and the noted character actress, Viola Roach. Reginald Mason, Carl Harbord, Joan Wetmore and Jack Merivale are among others in the company. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Earle

"THE GREAT LIE." Bette Davis' latest film, adapted from Poman Banks' novel, "Far Horizon," finds the star playing a young American girl fighting the sophistication of an older woman who is drawing her lover from her. George Brent is the man, an aviator-explorer, and Mary Astor completes the triangle. Lucille Watson, Hattie McDaniel, Grant Mitchell, Jerome Cowan and J. Farrell MacDonald head the supporting players. The Gala Easter Revue on the Earle stage stars Lorraine and Rognan, Ben Yost's Continentals, the Hellmans and the Roxyettes in new routines. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol

"THE TRIAL OF MARY DUGAN." Laraine Day and Robert Young are the stars of this new adaptation of the Bayard Veiller play. Others taking part in this story of the onetime reform school girl include Tom Conway, Frieda Inescort, John Litel, Marsha Hunt, Henry O'Neill and Sara Haden. Horace Heidt and his Musical Knights are the Capitol stage attraction, coming to F Street at the peek of their airlane success. Heard on both the Pot o' Gold and Treasure Chest programs, the orchestra also is noted for its recordings. Mimi Cabanne, Donna and her Don Juans, Frankie Carle, Larry Cotton, Fred Lowrey and Red Farrington are among the Heidt entertainers. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"THE DEVIL AND MISS JONES." Jean Arthur, Charles Coburn and Robert Cummings costar in this new comedy of a wealthy bachelor department store owner who becomes a clerk in his own establishment in an effort to learn why he is so disliked. One of the minor lady clerks befriends the seemingly helpless old man and takes H. M. to a secret meeting of the store employes. Edmund Gwenn, Spring Byington, S. Z. Sakoll, Robert E. Keane, William Demarest, Walter Kingsford and Montague Love are the other players. Costar Coburn will make four personal appearances with the film on Friday, opening day, only.

Metropolitan

"SHOCK WEEK." Two "chiller" films on one bill are promised for the new week at the Metropolitan, "The Mad Doctor" and "The Monster and the Lady." Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew and John Howard are the stars of the first, a tale of a brilliant psychiatrist driven mad through the actions of an unfaithful wife. Miss Drew also appears in one of the leading roles of the second, the story of an executed criminal whose brain was implanted in the skull of a great gorilla. Paul Lukas, Robert Paige, Joseph Calleia, Onslow Stevens and Cliff Edwards also are involved. Opens Friday morning.

Glen Echo

OPENING SATURDAY for its thirty-third season, the Amusement Park promises further streamlining of properties to the tune of $100,000, new gardens, shrubbery, roads and amusements. The World Cruise and Waterway Canal have been the scene of extensive reconditioning and the "Flying Scooter" has been imported from the New York World's Fair. At the stroke of 9 Saturday night, Paul Kain will strike up his band for his second season of dance music in the Spanish Garden ballroom. Adele Van will be back with her songs for this week-night feature. The picnic groves already are being booked in advance for special parties and outings. The park is reached via Conduit Road or Massachusetts Avenue by automobile or by street cars marked No. 20.

Palace

"MEN OF BOYS TOWN." Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney continue for a second week in this sequel to one of the most popular films of several seasons ago. Like "Boys Town," the story concerns itself with the efforts of Omaha's Father Flanagan on behalf of young lads who otherwise might be in reform schools.

Columbia

Little

"NIGHT TRAIN." With this British-made thriller entering its ninth week, the record run of "The Baker's Wife" on Ninth Street is tied. Rex Harrison, Margaret Lockwood and Paul Von Hernreid are the leading players involved in the seesaw machinations of the British and Nazi secret agents.

Trans-Lux

"RODEO DOUGH." Among the short subjects for the new week at the newsreel theater is this adventure of two girls at the Palm Springs Rodeo who meet such picture riders as Gene Autry, Johnny Weismuller, Tom Neal and Mickey Rooney. An "Information Please," with tennis' Alice Marble as guest expert; a "Sportscope" on Sun Valley and "Olive's Sweepstake Ticket," a color cartoon, are the other shorts. Opens Friday morning.

Gayety

Children's Theater

"HANS BRINKER" or "The Silver Skates" will complete the ninth Washington season of the Children's Theater of New York at the National Theater Saturday morning. The story of the little Dutch boy will be played by a cast familiar to Clara Tree Major's juvenile audiences. Tickets are available only at the Children's Theater office, 1734 F Street.

In Hollywood

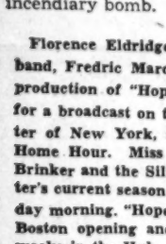
Hollywood, April 8.

The Louis Mayers' luncheon for the Bob Rubins, from New York (Bob was Louis' first partner), brought out a host of old friends. I was amazed to hear Sam Katz say that he had been in the picture business for 26 years. Someone said, "the only Katz I ever knew was of Balaban and Katz. Are you any relation?" Sam replied: "I happen to be it."



HOPPER

I've never heard anyone rave over a picture star as Sam did over Shirley Temple, and having been in the picture business so long, he's met them coming and going. Seems Shirley came in to see him the other day to discuss her first M-G-M picture which will be made with Wally Beery. "I almost blushed," said Sam, "when I asked for her autograph and I actually did blush when Shirley replied, 'I'd love to give you mine, but I must have yours first!'"

My nomination for the most polite guest was Alexander Korda. After stuffing himself with four wienies and a heaping plateful of sauerkraut, he asked his hostess for some bicarbonate of soda, saying he was distressed from a cheese sandwich he had eaten the day before! . . . I've never seen Norma Shearer or Merle Oberon look better.

Arthur Freed said, "it's because of Louis' apple cake that he can get such a gathering of people together on Sunday." And when I tasted it, I had to admit he had something there . . . Reba Rubin complained that she looked out of place in city clothes instead of sport clothes. She doesn't know it, but it was the ambition of everyone there to have the Park Avenue look, as she did.

If Janet Gaynor does the next story with Leo McCarey and Howard Hughes, which is all about Hollywood, they'll get a million dollars' worth of publicity because Janet doesn't hesitate to tell you that she played as an extra in one of Leo's first two-reelers, and it's a friendship that's lasted through the years.

The sight of those 15 beautiful Ziegfeld girls Director Bob Leonard took to Arrowhead Springs over the weekend, raised the blood pressure of the old gentlemen there taking the cure much more than the steam caves would have done. They left the cure for the swimming pool. One even ventured so close to look at a beauty that he fell in.

Frederic March finally has what he wanted—the role of the minister in "One Foot in Heaven" . . . Bob Taplinger's latest romance (he's the Warner Brothers praiser) is Marie Montez, in spite of the fact that on the "Sea Wolf" trek, when the San Francisco reporters asked what she was doing there, she said, "Oh, I'm just creating good will for Universal."

Mrs. Jack Cummings, wife of the producer, is designing jewels for Paul Flato—diamonds set in iron and smart as all get-out . . . Jerome Kern will have a new play on Broadway next fall, written in conjunction with Joe Fields and Jerome Chodorov, who wrote "My Sister Eileen."

One reason Cary Grant is to play "The Man Who Came to Dinner" is that Warners want to inject a romance into the story between the famous lecturer and his long-suffering secretary, and they suddenly woke up to the fact that there's no sex appeal in an elderly, bearded man. Also, they want to cash in the box office value of Cary's name, which is all right for Warners. The leading character is a profane, acid, dyspeptic whose only joy in life is making mischief in the lives of others, and who attempts deliberately to wreck, through wanton spitefulness, the romance of his secretary, the only person on earth for whom he has any fondness.

Monty Woolley, Alexander Woollcott and Clifton Webb made the part a tremendous success through the sheer malice of their portrayals. And now, poor Cary, one of our most romantic leading men, is expected to glamorize that character. It's small wonder that Kaufman gave the company a little difficulty over such a drastic change in his brain child.

Lorre Signs

Peter Lorre has been signed for a role in "The Uniform," in which Clark Gable and Rosalind Russell are co-starring.

Lockheed probably will commission Disney to do the first one.

G. HENRI-HAYE: If your government at Vichy is to get any more food from America the President will appoint a committee of three men to go to Vichy and administer the distribution . . . Burns Mantle: Canada Lee, who plays the title role in "Native Sons," last week was presented with a new auto. The gift came from the producers. Because you gave the show a four-star rating, there's a four-star design on the door. And inside a silver plaque, with the quote from the review: "Canada Lee is superb" . . . J. P. Morgan: Your daughter-in law, Mrs. Junius Morgan, is paying for those Arthur Murray dance instructors who have been touring the Army camps and teaching the soldiers how to dance.

Jed Harris: Frank Craven, who was signed by you to play the commentator-star of "Our Town," is doing the commentating for George Vanderhoef's FHA movie short . . . Jim Farley: Have you and Ed Flynn split?

NELSON ROCKEFELLER: Clifford Fischer, whose "Folies bergeres" shows were the best night club revues New York ever had seen, already has boked a tour of the South American amusement centers. He'll give the show a different title, in keeping with the good-will program . . . Adolf A. Berle: Democratic leaders here would like you to be the candidate for President of the City Council—and then perhaps move up to the Mayorality, when LaGuardia finally makes a one-way trip to Washington . . . Maxwell Bodenheim: Has William Saroyan offered you a job in his new play? John Shubert: Luna Parkers report that you plan to present grind shows there, this summer.

COL. FRANK KNOX: Your newest Navy officer, Ensign Franklin Roosevelt, jr., will couse no trouble to your department, and you may be sure that he never will miss making his ship, whenever, it leaves port . . . On the salary-orders—concerning the surplus above that required for actual living expenses—the President has arranged for that surplus to be forwarded to "dependent" Franklin D. Roosevelt, sr. In that way, he made sure that F. D., jr. won't be able to afford any diversions in port which might possibly result in his missing the boat.

Polish Veterans of 3 Invasions Go to Balkans

Polish veterans of three Nazi invasions are now moving from concentration points in the Middle East to the new Balkan front, Gen. Wladislaw Sikorski, prime minister of Poland's government in exile, disclosed last night.

Asked at a press conference at the Polish Embassy whether Polish troops are fighting in Greece or Yugoslavia, Gen. Sikorski said:

"You will hear about them within a week."

Gen. Sikorski, who is the active commander of Poland's armed forces as well as the head of her civil government, appeared before reporters in the khaki uniform of a full general, an erect figure with ruddy cheeks, ice-blue eyes and a close-cropped gray mustache.

The Polish leader spoke with pride of the continued service of Polish land, air and sea forces in the war against Germany, explaining he wanted it understood that "Poland is a real ally and is taking a real part in this war."

53,000 Poles in Service

Men who fought the Nazis in Poland, Norway and France are now guarding "an important and extensive sector of the British coast," he said. He put the strength of the Polish land forces in Britain at 34,000 and in the Middle East at 10,000.

The Polish navy and air force are both stronger today than they were at the outbreak of war September 1, 1939, he stated. There are more than 9,000 men in the air force, he added, "and they covered themselves with glory in the defense of London."

(Prewar estimates of Poland's air strength ranged from 500 to 1,100 first-line planes. The navy consisted of four destroyers three submares and auxiliary vessels making a total of 16,500 tons.)

Gen. Sikorski, commenting on a conference at the White House yesterday, said, "There is not the slightest doubt as to the President's very friendly attitude to Polish problems and his understanding of European problems."

Sees Secretary Hull

Secretary of Stae Hull, whom the Polish premier also met yesterday, at a press conference later described the discussion as a general interchange of information.

Gen. Sikorski declined to discuss in detail the Balkan military picture but praised the stand of Greece and Yugoslavia, who, he said, "are proving again that Hitler's scientifically applied terrorism does not work in certain nations."

The premier said his government maintains effective secret contacts with occupied Poland, where "the resistance and faith in final victory are unqualified and unbreakable."

A close understanding between Poland and Czecho-Slovakia will be the foundation of the post-war settlement in eastern Europe, he said, with the understanding developing into a federation comparable to the British Commonwealth or the United States.

Asked if "a democratic Germany" would be eligible for membership in such a federation, Gen. Sikorski answered:

"It might be better to let the Germans form a federation of their own. I don't believe very much in a good Germany, especially after the Hitler experiment."

The premier replied with scorn when a correspondent asked the whereabouts of former Foreign Minister Josef Beck and Marshal Smigly-Ridz, once inspector general of the Polish army.

Beck, he said, "allegedly is at Villa Lupescu in Bucharest, under guard of Rumanians. Smigly-Ridz's whereabouts are known only to himself."

Gen. Sikorski denied emphatically that the purpose of his trip was to select headquarters for the Polish government in the event of a transfer from London to Canada or the United States.

"That is an entirely stupid report invented by the German Fifth Column which attacks Aberican unity as well as Polish," he said.

"I am in America," he continued, "as a traveling salesman for Poland—a Poland which is fighting and which believes in its future."

Gen. Sikorski leaves Washington tomorrow for Palm Beach, where he will confer with Ignace Paderewski. He expects to return to Britain "in a few days."

Meeting Postponed

The Henry Clay Parent-Teacher Association of Lyon Park, Va., has postponed its regular meeting from tomorrow until next Thursday at 8 p. m., in the school auditorium. "The Outcome of Modern Education" is the subject for discussion.

WE, THE GOVERNORS...

Of the Southern States call to the attention of the President and others in authority the dangerous and unwarranted centralization of National Defense production in the older and more congested industrial areas.

Up to January 31st, 7½ billions of National Defense contracts (excluding ship building) had been let, of which only 7% were placed in 11 Southern States. Of a total of 302 new plants, only 24 were located in the South.

Of the 11½ billions of prime contracts awarded up to February 15th, a total of 80% has gone to 62 companies or financially interrelated groups of companies. This short-sighted policy of centralizing National Defense contracts is dangerous to the welfare of the Nation because it will inevitably result in

1. A shortage of labor and therefore the movement of large labor reserves out of the South into highly industrialized areas making for more congestion and creating vast economic problems when the emergency is over.
2. Create intolerable bottle necks in transportation of both raw materials into the congested industrial areas and in the shipment of finished products.
3. Create vast plant and production facilities in areas already overbuilt industrially, which will become idle and useless when the need for Defense production is at an end.

We believe that it is to the best interest of the Nation to decentralize production for National Defense . . . to establish plants where raw materials supply and loyal labor are readily available . . . where power and transportation facilities are ample . . . where climatic conditions are most favorable for year 'round production and where such plants will be needed for other production uses when the needs of National Defense have been fulfilled.

The South offers these and many other industrial advantages and is ready and willing to use its full resources for National Defense.

The best interests of the Nation can be served only if full use is made of the South's resources by industrial plants established in this area. And the same holds for other sections of the country where resources and labor are plentiful and where industrial congestion is not a liability. We further believe immediate steps in this direction are necessary.

Mrs. Myers Critically Burned

Mrs. Eva Dell Myers, 51, was burned critically last night when her one-story cabin near Glen Echo lock on the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal burned. She was taken to Georgetown University Hospital with third-degree burns.

Mrs. Myers, central figure of several river epics, was asleep in her cabin when the fire broke out. A Glen Echo volunteer fireman, Wilson Posey, 28, broke down a door and carried the woman to the outside, where she was given soda treatments by the Glen Echo Rescue Squad before being removed to the hospital. All her clothing had been burned off and her hair was on fire when she was rescued.

As Mrs. Myers was being carried to the ambulance she cried frantically for her police dog, Fritzie.

Mrs. Myers, formerly a physical culture instructor at the Shoreham Hotel, was rescued from the raging flood waters of the Potomac from her island home in 1935, and had been rescued several times in floods. In 1937 she was married to the riverman, William E. Swainson, who rescued her. They later separated.

She was the widow of Lieut. Carl H. Myers, United States Army aviator, who was killed in Honolulu in 1916.

MRS. EVA D. MYERS

Firemen said the fire apparently was caused by an exploding gasoline stove. The cabin had been constructed from timbers of a barge and was richly furnished.

Fr. Sheehy Sees War on Strikes

Special Dispatch to The Post

Newark, N. J., April 8.—Lieut. Comdr. Maurice S. Sheehy, of the United States Navy Chaplains' Corps, on leave as professor of religious education at Catholic University, Washington, predicted that the American people would "crack down" on defense strikes, in an address prepared for delivery to the A. Kempis Club here today.

Speaking of young men in training at a naval air station, Father Sheehy quoted one of them as saying: "Is it fair to ask us and hundreds of thousands of other young men to leave our chosen work and to engage in the defense of our country, when other men are merely seeing the defense program as a stepping stone to wealth?"

Father Sheehy said that within the next three months 150 young Americans might die because strikes are holding up repairs and vital replacements of machines and parts. "If the blood of these young men rests in any measure upon either self-seeking labor leaders or greedy industrialists, then may God have mercy on them, for the American people will refuse to show mercy."

Father Sheehy said that he always had defended and always would defend labor's right to organize.

"Those who refuse to allow Governmental agencies to mediate industrial disputes are offending our American sense of fair play," he said. "Out of this sense grows our collective indignations which find expression in law. No segment of our population may place an obstacle to the peace and security of our Nation while brutal tyranny is on the march abroad."

Father Sheehy, who was in Europe when Germany invaded Poland, said that President Roosevelt's peace efforts at that time were futile because "he did not speak the right language." The next time he asks for peace, Father Sheey said, Mr. Roosevelt will speak "with a background of the strongest Navy in the world, an Army sufficient for defense purposes and an air force of 50,000 planes." Then, he said, the dictators will hear, for "the only language they know is force."

Congressmen To Mock Work For Teachers

To give some 60 school teachers from 20 States a demonstration of how Congress would perform its duties if Congressmen were not taking a vacation, Chairman Jennings Randolph has summoned a session of his House District Committee for 10 a. m. today.

When the Institute of National Government for Social Studies planned a four-day convention of teachers in the Colonial Hotel this week, it fully expected to provide delegates with an opportunity to see the legislative mill in action.

But Congress upset its plans by declaring a recess for Easter.

J. Orin Powers, director of the institute's teacher program, took his dilemma to Randolph, an old friend. Randolph responded by saying he would ask as many members of his committee as can be reached to attend a mock committee meeting to demonstrate to the teachers the functioning of congressional committees.

The committee will consider District suffrage, but only, Randolph emphasized, to give the demonstration the appearance of realism. Randolph will discuss the subject and then time will be given the teachers for asking questions.

With Mary Harris

"STYLIZED SWING" is the phrase for Mayfair's new music by the Gentlemen of Rhythm. It's hot rhythm plus large dipperfuls of silky elegance, a paradoxical olla podrida of sweet sounds that may well be a prophecy of a new summer melody mode. Joe Browne leads from a pair of guitars. His chief aide is versatile Joe Costa, who alternates on piano, accordion and vibraphone, also warbles with dangerous glamour. Mayfairites were completely a-dither over the newcomers, gave them an overwhelming Gallup poll of approval.

Marvin Henderson, rated as a true guitar virtuoso, will join Milton Davis' Rainbow Room orchestra on Friday. Marvin has a whole family of guitars, including an electric giant that weighs 25 pounds. Blending of the Henderson guitar with Rainbow's novachord and violin implies rarely shimmering string harmonies.

METRONOME "FOLLIES." Jack Coffey's revues in Metronome are qualifying him for the title of Washington's Earl Carroll. Most eye-caressing is the "Pages From Esquire," presented by the Three Smart Girls, who look as though they'd strolled right out of Petty pictures. Sidney Foster, a native Londoner, complete with Cockney accent, does song-and-dance bits that would enhance Billy Rose's "Gay Nineties" show. Byron Henry proves that a knowledge of magic isn't as necessary as good stooges for a magic act. Hit of the evening is Boris' resonant barytoning of "Without a Song."

VAUDEVILLE HONEYMOON. Federico and Rankin, now dancing at the Shoreham, combined their honeymoon with a vaudeville tour of Europe in 1939. They also perfected their "magic dance" at this time, practicing it ten hours a day for six months.

THREE-STAR SHOW AT TROIKA. Martha Errol, of "Blossom Time;" Rosita Rios, top-flight Mexican songbird, and dancer Gloria Belmonte are givig a record-breaking show at Troika. All are of star caliber and would singly glorify any musical. Martha Errol's rare soprano soars in semiclassical numbers. Dynamic Risita always stops the show. Gloria's clicking heels and castanets are in the best Castilian tradition.

BILL KAVAKOS,
dynamic proprietor of Kavakos' Grill

"Cherry Blossom Cocktails," Hi Hat's annual tribute to the cherry blossoms," are again on tap. Manager Oscar says they're the only novelty cockails that register big with the public. They're a lovely Schiaparelli pink, and Oscar's thinking of floating cherry petals on them.

HOOPS, M'DEAR! Hoops are things of magic as handled by the Belmont Brothers at Casino Royal. No mater how they roll 'em, the hoops come rolling right back to them. The Belmont boys' act is climaxed by a seance of juggling flaming diavolos. Frank Arena's tap stepping sounds like a speeding typewriter and Phyllis Merrill gives the dainty touch to acrodancing.

Afternoon tea with cinnamon toast is the newest innovation in the Carton's Cosmos Room. British, what? A handsome silver service gives the proper ritual touch.

DANCING AND TALKING BIRDS dominate fun at the Lotus. John Tio, the parrot raconteur, astonishes the folks with his songs, whistling and imitations. John is sweet 16 years old, but his life expenctancy is an easy century . . . Equally starting but more glamorous is dancer Tenya togged out as a tropical rooster and weaving like a Haitian mama-loi.

RIVER BEND is at its most enticing in the springtime. The scenery's lovely, the steak's are tender and the music's hot. Maestro George Stein takes pleasure in never missing a single request number. And we're told that John Frazier, highly diverting crystallogist, is now at River Bend.

MUSICAL EXPLOSIONS. "Alexander, the Swoose," beautifully batty, especially as given the works by Dick Koons' Band in the Mayflower Lounge . . . "You Got Me This Way"—not the original but the bouncing parody being dished up sizzling by Marie (Butch) Austin at Paul Young's . . . "El Mariachi," a bit of Mexican fireworks being exploded by Lina D'Acosta at the Silver Fox . . . "Goodbye, Now," being done with fun and flippancy by Eileen George and Matt Windsor in the Anchor Room . . . The Pan-American trio in Ciro's Famous Village. It includes "Mayor" Ciro and his French horn singer, Cecelia and accordionist Albert. They're all sombreroed and what they do to Mexican numbers!

Rodd Raffell, of the Nightingale, puts new streamlining on his dance music every week or so. One member or another of the band journeys to New York and picks up the freshest tricks in rhythm.

TODAY'S CAKE-CUTTING DAY. For the Neptune Room, Restaurant "823" and Burt's Trans-Lux will all be holding scrumptious anniversary parties . . . A Paul Kain group and Adele Van will join Beverly Stull in cutting cake and melodies at Burt"s Trans-Lux. Springtime and birthday decorations plus Proprietor Burt's beaming smile will give that holiday atmosphere . . . While it's "anniversary week" all week at the Neptune Room, there'll be special birthday doings tonight with a "first-nighters party" and radio entertainers. Bob and Bertie Hellman, whose engagement has recently been extended, and the Dalton Boys will also be melodizing arouud . . . Restaurant "823" will give its patrons a bonus of new entertainment at its first birthday party tonight. They're Taylor and Taylor, who are equally at home in North or South American music. Both sing, while one is a smart emcee and the other does unusual things with an accordion.

LOPATIN

IMPORTANT BRIEFIES. Ida Clarke's organ has been moved over toward the center of Lounge Riviera for atmospheric purposes. First thing you see as you enter is Ida surrounded by her young fans . . . Maestro Don Carper, of Cafe Caprice, has been trying to break in a new car. He hasn't been able to get more than 1,000 miles on the speedometer in two months . . . Leo Tos, new manager at Olmsted's, has installed a special hand-picked corps of waiters.

PRIME SWEET MELODY. The "Roumanian Fantasy" being violined by Michel at the Plymouth. It's undiluted gypsy enchantment . . . That lovely combination of "High on a Windy Hill" and "Amo Polla" warbled by Eve Knight in the King Cole Room . . . "In a Little Nook," a fetching melody written by Col. C. C. Schiffeler of the Raleigh and given a delightfull rendition via two pianos and violin in the Pall Mall Room.

THOUGHTS ON DINING. Chef Maggia, of the Madrillon has invented a new fish sauce, called Bizcaina. It isn't on the menu yet. But watch for it . . . Everything at the Parrott is delicious. But we dote on the way they bring you rolls right from the oven. So hot you can't pick 'em up . . . Hogate's sea food has a national reputation. Many business men from the sea foodless Middle West taxi right down there as soon as they check in at their hotels . . . You'll find nothing more palate-tickling than a club steak at Dick's Grill.

The 'Great One' Sounds Off

Charlotte, N. C., April 8.—We drew Buck Newsom as a train companion from Florida and would you like to know what the great one is thinking about the 1941 pennant race? He is thinking that "It's strictly a two-team affair between us and the Yankees." When Buck says "us," he means, of course, himself and some other stand-ins on the pay roll of the Tigers.

POVICH

Newsom narrows the pennant race down to two teams—the Tigers and Yankees—in this fashion. He says: "The Indians are no good, the Red Sox are no good, and the others are not very good at all. If we don't win it the Yankees will, and if the Yankees don't we will."

We reminded Buck that his prediction was a bit at variance with a recent poll of the American League managers which turned up only one vote for the Tigers to repeat and four votes that Cleveland would win the pennant. The great one merely grinned. "Well, that makes four teams who will be easy to lick," he said. "Teams managed by four guys who are unsmart enough to pick the Indians to win the pennant aren't going to be very tough in this league."

Newsom admits he doesn't like the Indians. "Those cry-babies couldn't hold a lead if it had handles on it. If they get out in front, we'll just sneak up behind 'em and say 'boo,' and they'll drop everything. The Cleveland pitching staff is the most overrated thing in the league and they don't have anybody to bat across those runs. You newspaper fellows keep saying the Indians were in a batting slump last year. They weren't in any slump, they were just hitting their stride."

As for the Red Sox, Newsom dismisses them perfunctorily. "Joe Cronin will take care of the Red Sox for every team in the league, the way he handles those Boston pitchers. By the middle of June, they won't be able to comb their hair, their arms will be so tired. And if Cronin comes up with a good pitcher, he'll probably trade him in midseason (Cronin traded Newsom to the Browns in a year when Buck won 16 games.")

Buck Thinks Joe Could Be Better

Cronin, it seems, is not Buck's idea of a great manager. He traded off Ben Chapman after Chappie had hit .340 for the Red Sox, and then in a year when he could have won the pennant with pitching, he traded off Elden Auker, who came up with 18 wins for the Browns. That's great management, but it ought to have a "mis" in front of it. How about a guy who sends me and Red Kress and Buster Mills to the Browns and also some cash for Joe Vosmik, who was out of the league a year later? The Tigers gave six players and $100,000 to get me from the Browns 12 months afterward.

"Sure, I had a run-in with Cronin. He didn't like me and it was vice versa. I didn't mind him telling me how to pitch, but I didn't like it when he kept running in from shortstop to the pitching mound 20 times a game like a half-scared old lady, I finally had to tell him to tend to the shortstopping and I'd tend to the pitching. I don't think he liked me after that. Bu I don't want to say anything against Joe," Buck grinned. "He's a nice fella."

According to Newsom, he got a higher salary from the Browns than from the Red Sox. "St. Louis raised me from $12,500 to $15,000 after the Red Sox refused to give me an increase. I won 16 games for Boston after joining them on June 15 in 1937 but still they wouldn't raise my pay." (Newsom won 11 games after joining the Red Sox in 1937.)

'Now I Don't Like to Brag, but . . .'

Buck was saying he didn't want to brag, but that he was, in fact, the highest paid pitcher in baseball. "If Mr. Briggs says I am making more than Bob Feller, then you can depend on it because he's a very truthful man. I don't have anything against Feller. He helped me to get the kind of rough I'm getting. Mr. Briggs told me before last year's World Series that I'd be the highest paid pitcher in the league this season and he didn't go back on his promise."

The Tigers probably will win the pennant, Buck was saying. "We got only one vote in that poll, but it was a pretty important vote. The man who said we'd win it is Del Baker, and if you remember last year's vote he was the only one who picked us then. We haven't been looking any worse in the South this year than we did last spring. Heavy hitters like we've got never hit well in the spring. The pitching is a bit ahead of them. And then they begin to catch up with it and then teams like ours begin to win a lot of ball games."

The Yankees will be sort of tough to beat, Buck admits, but they're no solid club. "Joe McCarthy can get panicky, too, when his team starts to lose a few ball games. He'll scramble his infield like its never been scrambled before and some of those Yanks may need a compass to find out what position they're playing from day to day. But they're going to be a better ball team than they were last year, and it will be a nice race between the Yankees and the Tigers. And if it's a race between those two clubs, it wouldn't surprise me if the Yankees had a very good season and finished second."

St. Louis, April 8.—Arthur Donovan, the best referee in the country, made his first visit to St. Louis, to referee his sixteenth Louis fight. But the name Donovan is far from unknown here in boxing circles, for this was the home of Mike Donovan, Arthur's late great Dad, Old Mike, who was destined to become the middleweight champion of the world, and the country's best boxing instructor, was mustered out of the Union Army here in 1865.

CONSIDINE

"He was only 18 then, but he had fought through four years of the Civil War," Art was telling us before climbing into the ring to officiate at the Louis-Musto fight. "He had gotten plenty of fighting in the war but not the kind he wanted. He wanted to fight bare knuckled, and, of course, his officers wouldn't stand for that. They told him it was a degrading business and that he'd better have nothing to do with it. But when he got mustered here, he began looking around for a way to get into prize fighting. Somebody told him that the way to strengthen his arms and wrists would be to become a ship's caulker. So that's the kind of job he got here in St. Louis. And, for training, he used to walk along the levees during his lunch hour, challenging everybody his size, and bigger. He just loved to fight."

Mike turned pro in 1866 and literally fought them all, without benefit of gloves or boxing commissions. "He lost track of how many fights he had," Donovan told us. "And it's no wonder, for he had an awful lot of them and a lot of tough ones. . . . Yet he wasn't marked up much," Donovan said, thoughtfully caressing his own neatly cauliflowered ear.

Police Ended the Bout in Forty-seventh Round

"He had a kind of flat ear and a scar on his nose, which isn't bad for those bare-knuckle days. John L. Sullivan gave him the bum nose. Dad fought him in Boston. It was a four-round match, and Dad weighed only 153 at the time. In the first round Sullivan hit him in the back of the head so hard that it knocked Dad flat on his face and broke his nose. But he got up and went the distance with Sullivan. And he boxed him countless times after that. They toured the country together, boxing.

"It must've been tough in those days," Donovan mused, looking over the big crowd at the arena. "Dad worked his way to Philadelphia, fighting and working at his caulking trade, and got a room in my mother's house. He wouldn't dare tell her that he was a fighter. But one night in Philly he fought Jimmy Murray in what must have been a murderous affair. Bare knuckles, of course, and against the law. In the forty-seventh round the cops raided the joint and dad and Murray had to run. Dad reached a train and eventually got to Chicago, but the police caught him there and brought him back to trial.

"It must have been a strange trial. He and Murray finally stood before the judge and they looked like cinches to go to jail for a year. But Dad got an idea. He suddenly spoke up, to the judge, and he said, 'Your honor, you can do with me as you please, but I want you to know that Jimmy Murray and I are the closest of friends, that there never lived a finer man than Jimmy Murray, and that I love him as a brother. What we did was a little business affair, that's all. A friendly bit of exercise so to speak, nothing more.' And, with that, Dad leaned over and kissed Murray on the cheek. Well, sir, it worked. The judge's heart was touched and he let them go. Dad and Murray were lifelong friends, after that. Today, you know, Jimmy's son is fencing instructor at the New York A. C., and I'm the boxing instructor. I succeeded Dad as instructor there 26 years ago, after he had served 36 years."

Buddy Baer Stops Galento in Seventh Round; Louis Kayoes Musto in 9th Before 20,000

Commission Holds Up Tony's Purse

'Beer Barrel' Fails To Answer Bell For 7th; Claims Hand Is Broken

By Al Hailey

Buddy Baer followed in the footsteps of his illustrious brother, Madcap Maxie, last night at Uline's Arena by scoring a technical knockout over Tony Galento in a wierd battle that found the New Jersey beer baron sitting in his corner screaming that his hand was broken.

Galento's finish came at the end of the sixth round, when he returned to his corner and had handlers rip off his left glove.

The action created pandemonium in the ring, and chaos reigned as the record indoor crowd of 8,500 drowned out Referee Eddie LaFond's decision acclaiming Baer as the winner by a T. K. O. in the seventh round. Claude W. Owen, chairman of the District Boxing Commission, promptly ordered Galento's purse held up pending an examination.

Galento had been absorbing a terrific punching from the junior Baer when he returned to his corner claiming he had broken his left hand in a wild swing at Buddy's head.

Baer Charges Galento

LaFond dashed across the ring as he noted Galento's glove being removed and when his cry for time out was lost in the clang of the bell for the start of the seventh he turned to hold up Baer's hand as the winner.

But Baer already was charging across the ring like a young bull and lunged at Tony, still sitting on his stool puffing and wheezing from six rounds of vain attempts to get under Buddy's stabbing left hand.

Dr. Marvin McLean, Boxing Commission doctor, examined the hand, but refused to make any diagnosis until he had taken an X-ray.

While the cash customers—who contributed a net gate of $21,550.16 to see Tony and Buddy make a bid for a Joe Louis fight here in July—milled around, Commissioners ordered Galento to report to Casualty Hospital for an X-ray.

Purse Withheld

When Galento refused to go to the hospital until his personal physician had treated his hand, Owen ordered his share of the purse, 27½ per cent, withheld until an examination is made this morning. If the injury is found to be of a minor nature, Galento stands the chance of being suspended for life in the District.

Until the end came, Tony and Buddy had been involved in a rough-house brawl of the barroom type which kept the crowd in a constant uproar.

Buddy, surprising one and all with his calm workmanship, was the master of the show almost throughout. Only in the first round did he show signs of turning tail. That was Galento's only round on The Post score sheet.

Galento Tires Badly

As early as the third round, Galento was a worn-out citizen, and in the fifth it looked as though Buddy might finish him when he landed a roundhouse right on Tony's jaw that rocked him back on his heels and made him snarl in pain.

Buddy's victory supposedly gives him the coveted shot at Joe Louis' heavyweight championship here in July, but the quality of "bumhood" he displayed last night against Tony's blubbery hulk scarcely branded him as a dire threat to Louis' title. He was outweighed by seven pounds, weighing in himself at 240. At the end, Tony's face

Zivic Ordered To MeetMarteliano

New York, April 8 (AP). — The New York State Athletic Commission today ordered Fritzie Zivic, world welterweight boxing champion, to meet Tony Marteliano, of New York, in a ten-round nontitle fight before filling a Philadelphia engagement with Phil Furr, of Washington.

Jimmy Bronson, promoter of the Bronx Coliseum, said Zivic would tangle with Marteliano there, April 25. He is slated to go against Furr May 5.

'Scuttle' Job, One Fan Calls Galento Effort

By Tony Neri

"Two-ton Tony scuttled himself, was the cry of one inebriated fan as the gent passed Galento's dressing room in the catacombs of Uline's Ice Arena last night after Buddy Baer had made it verdict No. 2 for the California Baers over the Orange, N. J., tavern keeper.

Tony wasn't saying much after the fight. Not once during the night—either in the ring or in the dressing room afterward—did Tony call anybody a bum. His left hand was swollen, but the doctor reserved judgment on whether Galento's mitt was broken until an X-ray could be taken.

Mrs. Galento waited outside the little man's dressing room and later was admitted. She said Tony had hurt his hand before the fight.

Nobody in the Galento camp offered any alibi. Jimmy Frain, Two-Ton's faithful trainer, sent a boy for three beers, but the soapy-suds beverage isn't served in the arena, so soft drinks were substituted.

Jersey Transplanted

Tony wasn't without his rooting section. Down from Jersey was most of the family and the parish priest. Also down was A. T. Green, boxing commissioner of New Jersey.

It was a different setting in Buddy Baer's dressing room.

"How'd I do, pop?" Buddy asked Ancil Hoffman, his manager. "O. K.," chimed in Trainer Izzy Klein in a gleeful mood. "I knew you had it and it was only a matter of another round if it hadn't been stopped," continued Izzy.

Baer said he wasn't worried at all by Galento's wild right hand. "I could have taken the fight earlier, but I was sure the longer it went, the more margin I'd have, and it wouldn't be any doubt as to the winner," Baer announced nonchalantly.

N. Y. Calls Buddy

Buddy wasn't even breathing hard after the gruelling brawl. After the photographers had taken a bevy of pictures, Baer took his shower and announced he was ready to go 10 rounds with anyone.

It wasn't Galento who asked the fight to be stopped but Jimmy Frain, his handler. Tony wanted to go on but it was apparent that

Crouching Foe Puzzles Champion

Crowd, Unaware Of Musto's Plight, Boos as Referee Halts the Fight

By Bob Considine.

St. Louis, Mo., April 8.—Like a bungling matador who can't find the precise spot to finish off a desperately wounded bull, Joe Louis defended the heavyweight championship of the world for the sixteenth time tonight by finally stopping tough Tony Musto, a Chicago nobody, in the ninth round.

Referee Arthur Donovan stepped in after 1 minute and 36 seconds of the ninth and called a halt to the gore-galore

Musto looked as if he had been ducking for apples in a barrel of red paint. The bull-chested little battler leaked from a dozen wounds, and much of him had come off on Louis' brown hide or had rained down red on ringside typewriters.

Musto Game

But Musto wanted to fight after Donovan stepped in, and those in the capacity crowd of 20,000 who could not see the extent of the wounds around his eyes let loose a mighty bray of indignation. But Donovan was never more right.

It was scheduled as just one of those bum-of-the-month fights, but like the Abe Simon affair, this one turned out surprisingly. Musto's 5-foot-7 body and his natural method of fighting from a full waist-bend position, plainly bothered Joe and forced the champion to play a waiting game, which is not exactly Joe's fistic forte.

Joe retreated astutely throughout the entire fight, giving ground before the headlong, courageous, stopping charge of the challenger. He popped away at the exposed top of Musto's wet black hair and tried to pry and uppercut Musto into a standing position, so he could get a good shot at his jaw.

Musto Cagy

But Musto had memorized his how-to-worry-Louis lessons very well. He stayed in close to Louis, head down around Joe's belt line, often hooked for Louis' head from his deep bend and protected his face well from Joe's uppercuts.

Louis kept backing away, jabbing, measuring warily guarding against Musto's occasional and rather anemic flurries, and protecting himself from any sudden upswing of Musto's hard head. Several times Musto's bullish charge saw the challenger's head dig into Louis' middle and force Joe to say, "oof," and fold down over Musto's back—a muscle-bound white back which was relieved by a curious knot of hair growing out of a black skin blotch.

Musto Wins Two Rounds

Musto won the first and sixth rounds and was at least as effective as Joe in the fifth. But Joe was getting to him from the second on. In the third the lightning in the champ's fists spat and crackled and dumped Musto on the deck for a count of one, though Musto had exposed less of his chin than a frightened turtle.

The loser began to bleed from the second round and never stopped. Louis jabbed and dug away at the wounds, seeking in bull ring fashion the artfully concealed vulnerable spot. But it was a long, tedious and very messy process.

Nats, Behind Sundra, Again Beat Tigers, 4-2

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Charlotte, N. C., April 8.—Ho-hum, the Nats beat the Tigers again. This has been going on now for six straight games. The score today was 4 to 2, and the setting was the shiny new $50,000 stadium Clark Griffith built for his Charlotte farm in the Piedmont League.

The natives were out in force for the affair, with the crowd of 5,844 filling the park. There were thousands from nearby South Carolina who came to see their native son, Buck Newsom, in action for the Tigers. Newsom swaggered and preened himself before their gaze but he was nevertheless the losing pitcher. The Nats raked him for six of their ten hits and three of their runs in the five innings he worked.

Bucky Harris beamed. So did Clark Griffith. They were watching their new pitcher, Steve Sundra, do an impressive job on the Tigers. The big right-hander they bought from the Yankees ten days ago for $10,000 indicated today that he was a bargain. He pitched seven innings, gave up only four hits and two runs, and was togging his fast ball by the Tigers for five strikeouts.

Lewis Injured

But in the seventh inning, the Nats' bosses were in panic. Bob Uhle, rookie left-hander, and a wild one, hit Buddy Lewis on the left wrist with a fast ball and put him out of action. Lewis slumped to the ground and was removed from the game. He had barely escaped being hit on the head. Examination of Lewis' hand revealed no bone fracture, however, only a slight bruise.

Before the inning was over, young Uhle had hit another man, George Archie, in the back, and also cut loose with a wild pitch. At the game's end, the 71-year-old owner of the Nats was fuming at Manager Del Baker of the Tigers.

"They ought to be shot for pitching that wildcat against a big league club so close to the opening of the season," said Griffith. "That kind of pitching is liable to kill somebody.

Jimmy Bloodworth went to third base for the Nats after Lewis' injury, and Buddy Myer replaced

Dodgers 'B' Team Upsets Yankees, 5-1

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., April 8.—The Brooklyn Dodgers sent their "B" team against the surprised New York Yankees today and whipped them, 5 to 1, to gain a 3-2 lead in their spring series. A crowd of 5,562 fans saw the Yank's fielding fall apart while the American League sluggers were held to six hits by Curt Davis and Bill Swift.

Pee Wee Reese was the only "regular" in today's opening lineup. But the reserves did all right in the third inning, when they slammed Hank Borowy for six hits, including doubles by Dixie Walker and Jim Wasdell, to score four runs with the aid of two Yankee errors. Frank Crosetti's wild heave let the first Brooklyn run score in the second inning.

Nine Runs in 8th Win for Indians

Pulaski, Va., April 8 (AP).—A wild eighth inning gave the Cleveland Indians nine runs and an 11-to-8 triumph over the New York Giants today.

The Indians were eight runs behind when Hal Schumacher weakened in the seventh and permitted two runs on Jeff Heath's triple, Gene Desautels' double, an infield out and a wild pitch.

"Prince Hal" went to pieces in the next session. Oscar Grimes led off with the Tribe's third triple and Hal walked four men in a row for two runs.

Hockey Bruins Win, 2 to 1

By International News Service

Boston, April 8.—The Boston Bruins tonight registered their second straight win over the Detroit Red Wings, 2-1, in their Stanley Cup duel for world hockey supremacy.

The Boston boys overcame a Detroit lead by ramming over a pair of goals in the final seven minutes of play to clinch the verdict.

The Red Wings opened the scoring in the second minute of the final stanza when Mud Bruneteau golfed a 10-foot drive by Goalie Frank Brimsek.

The Reardon-Cain-Smith combination enabled the Bruins to produce the equalizer in the fourteenth minute of the third period. On a rush play spearheaded by Terry Reardon, Des Smith gained control of the puck in a mixup and flipped to Herb Cain. A back-pass to the on-rushing Reardon flashed the red light.

Four minutes later, the Bruins sealed victory when Roy Conacher took a pass from Milt Schmidt and blazed a 20-foot shot by Johnny Mowers.

A crowd of 15,000, the smallest of the play-off series, were in attendance.

Tech Uses 3 Hurlers in Opening Triumph Over Devitt, 6-0

Buddy Webb Starts Off Brilliantly

Brother Sam, Green Show Wildness but Prep's Ineffectual Batting Helps Out

McKinley High's 1941 baseball team, under the guidance of Coach "Dutch" Usilaner for the first time, made its debut yesterday on its home field with a 6-0 victory over Devitt Prep, which had smashed both its previous opponents.

Sending three hurlers into action, the Maroons were threatened in almost every inning as the result of wildness, but finally got their shutout through Devitt's weakness at bat. Buddy Webb, 240-pound veteran, got the starting mound assignment and went four innings with only two safeties registered against him. He fanned six and allowed a single base on balls for the best record.

Charley Green, fireballer, then pitched no-hit ball for three frames, but kept himself in trouble continually with five walks. Buddy's little brother, Sam, hurled the last two stanzas for Tech and gave up two safeties and as many walks. For the opposition, long Bob Cullen for a free base was Outfielder Lewis, went the route, holding Tech to eight hits, fanning nine batsmen and issuing one base on balls.

Oddly enough, the only man to reach Cullen for a free base was Outfielder Lewis, the first batter to face him. And it was Lewis who brought home the first Maroon run when "Shrimp" Brewer laid down the only triple of the game. That first-inning tally was augmented by two more in the second, off an error, stolen base and two singles, and single runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth.

Bryan and Harvel each had two hits for the winners, and Kowaleski turned in half the loser's blows with a brace of singles in three trips to the plate.

crowd, Musto kept after Joe long after he had been cut to ribbons by Joe's razory but never climatic clouts. His eyes were a sight and the upper part of his body was as red as a matador's cape. But he was still strong, and was still carrying the fight to Louis, though Joe was giving him a pitiless pounding, when Donovan mercifully intervened and did what Joe couldn't do—stop it.

Fight Sets Mark

The fight, first one held in this city for a year, set a record for St. Louis. It drew 17,956 paid admissions to the big arena and the sum of that turnout was a gross gate of $52,993.75. Louis got 40 per cent of the net, Musto 15 per cent.

Mrs. Musto proudly posed with her butchered spouse after the fight. Louis got a glove burn behind his ear and the ring finger on his right hand was swollen. He said it was still sore from the Simon fight and that he didn't open up more because Jack Blackburn, his trainer, was afraid he might break his hands on the top of Musto's head and thus imperil the big outdoor fights planned for this summer.

"Can't do nothing but jab a man who fights like Musto," Joe said a little mournfully in his dressing room. Then he brightened up. "I like straight-up fighters—like Billy Conn."

Smoky, And How

The theme around the press bench was, "Smoke gets in your eyes."

There were more Congressmen on the press bench than there were scribes.

J. Edgar Hoover, top man of FBI, was a late arrival. Steve Early, the President's secretary occupied a press box seat. Arch McDonald was an interested spectator. The biggest hand of the night was given to Jimmy DeChard after his knockout of Joe Linsie in 2:26 of the first round in the semifinal. Jimmy Lake and Ray Michael divided the announcing duties. All in all, it was a good show and the fans got a run for their money.

Al Milnar, Cleveland southpaw, was battered for six runs in the first inning, but stayed around until Ken Jungels took over in the eighth, followed by Clint Brown in the ninth.

Bosox Again Beat Cincinnati, 7-6

Louisville, Ky., April 8 (AP).—A three-run homer by Rookie Stanley Spence in the first inning sent the World Champion Cincinnati Reds down to a 3-0 defeat at the hands of the Boston Red Sox again today, giving the American Leaguers a 7-6 advantage in the spring exhibition series.

Whitey Moore and Elmer Riddle held the Sox to three hits, but one of them was Spence's 360-foot effort with Dom DiMaggio and Lou Finney on base. Dom had walked and Lou got on on a bad throw on a double-play ball.

Kreevich's Homer Beats Cubs, 9-7

Lubbock, Tex., April 8 (AP).—Mike Kreevich's eleventh-inning home run with Taft Wright on base gave the Chicago White Sox a 9-to-7 victory over the Cubs today in the ninth game of their spring series.

Kreevich paced a three-run rally in the seventh with his first homer of the game, but had to share offensive honors with Larry French, Cub pitcher, who hit homers in the fourth and sixth innings off Bill Dietrich. French yielded 11 hits in nine innings, Paul Erickson succeeding him.

Clovis, N. Mex., April 8 (AP).—Philadelphia's Athletics took their fourth straight game from Pittsburgh today, 8 to 7, a five-run rally in the ninth falling one short of a tie.

Benny McCoy's third-inning single with the bases loaded sparked a three-run uprising that started the A's to victory. Freddy Chapman, up from Toronto, slammed a homer in the eighth with two Athletic mates aboard to help clinch the contest.

Lee Handley delivered a three-run homer for Pittsburgh in the ninth-inning outburst. Bill Clemsen worked eight frames for Pittsburgh, the longest any of their hurlers have worked so far, and yielded all the runs.

Legislator Asks May 17 Set Aside For Connie Mack

Harrisburg, Pa., April 8 (AP).—Representative Elmer Kilroy, Speaker of the House of Representatives, introduced a resolution today asking the Assembly to designate May 17 as Connie Mack day in honor of the veteran manager of the Philadelphia Athletics baseball team.

"One who hse lived in our midst for well nigh four score years," said the Philadelphia Democrat, "has by his example and industry made it possible to develop in the ranks of clean sportsmanship exemplars of the value of physical development and clean living as standards for youth."

Wilson Faces Anacostia Nine This Afternoon

Left to open the 1941 interhigh baseball series alone since the postponement of champion Central's clash with Western, Woodrow Wilson and Anacostia today trade blows at the Indians' field at 3:30.

To the teams which finished farthest down the standings last year thus goes the headline position in the first public school game of the new season. Central, victor for the past two years, will not set action until April 25 against Roosevelt, its home field having been torn up, retarding practice.

Despite their lowly positions at the end of last season, Wilson and Anacostia will be well scouted by rival coaches today. Each is short of veteran material, but so is every club in the series. Even Central can look to only two regulars of last year in its search for a third title.

Wilson, if nothing else, can send a seasoned hurler to the mound. In Nino Briscuso, calm right-hander, the Tigers boast a pitcher who looked exceptionally well last year and figures to be considerably better now. Anacostia will probably start Gene Nunnally, another right-side thrower, who had little experience in 1939 when big Art Faircloth was doing all the pitching.

Two straight victories so far lie behind Wilson, whereas Anacostia was nosed out in its only game to date, 7-6, by Devitt. The Indians showed themselves something less than terrific at bat or in the field in that one, getting only three hits while committing seven errors.

In the only other game today, Tech makes its second start in two days as it helps Gonzaga open its schedule. The game will be at Tech, also at 3:30.

Woodrow Wilson, defending team champion, started its title defense auspiciously at Beaver Dam with a 6-3 victory over Tech. Experiment Fails, Giants' Danning Will Catch Again

By the United Press

Pulaski, Va., April 8.—Hank Danning will catch for the New York Giants this season, Manager Bill Terry said today, because the attempt to convert him into an outfielder was a "distinct failure."

Terry said that "wanton base stealing" against the Giants recently—due to lack of a catcher who can pick men off the bases—and Danning's poor impression as an outfielder made up his mind.

Danning will catch all pitchers excepting Cliff Melton and Harry Gumbert, who will be caught by Gabby Hartnett, former manager of the Chicago Cubs, apparently leaving Reserve Catcher Ken O'Dea as trading material.

Bloodworth at second, indicating Bucky Harris' plan of action if Lewis is drafted into the Army. Bloodworth fumbled one ball, but he atoned for that misplay on the next play by spearing a line drive off Tebbetts' bat and completing a double out with a superior throw to first.

Rookie George Archie solidified his position in the Washington lineup today with one of the longest blows of the game—a second-inning double that figured in two Washington runs off Newsom. Archie also played a fancy game at first base.

After Sundra's retirement at the end of the seventh, Alex Carrasquel took charge and held the Tigers scoreless. He was in trouble in both of the last two innings but escaped nicely after giving up on hit in each.

Chapman Has Three Hits

Ben Chapman accounted for three of the Nats' ten hits—one a double to center in the first inning. Before he was forced out of the game, Buddy Lewis had hit a pair of consecutive singles to the delight of the home-town citizens from nearby Gastonia.

Hank Greenberg did the Tigers out of a scoring chance in the first inning when, paradoxically, he hit a single with two out and Stainback on first. Greenberg tried to go to second when Chapman momentarily fumbled the hit and was trapped between the bases. The upshot was that Stainback was run down between third and the plate.

Newsom put himself in trouble in the second when he walked Bloodworth. Archie immediately followed with his long two-bagger to center, and Bloodworth scored all the way from first. Sundra drew a walk, but on Case's single to left, Archie was held to third base. Cramer got him home with a long fly to center.

Tigers Tie Count

It was in Sundra's one bad inning, the fifth, that the Tigers tied the score at 2-2. Up to that point, the big right-hander had allowed one hit. He had one out when Bartell doubled to left, and then he walked Sullivan. Newsom dumped a ball down the first-base line, and Sundra tagged him out, only to fumble the ball whereupon the decision was reversed. Stainback clouted a double to right that scored two runs. But with men on second and third and only one out, Sundra got out of the inning gracefully. He caused Gehringer to loft a short fly to Chapman, and he got McCosky on a short grounder in front of the plate. The Nats actually won the ball game in the fifth when Chapman and Lewis swatted center-field singles before Newsom could get anybody out. Jimmy Pofahl scored Lewis from third with the longest ball he has ever hit, a fly into left field that Greenberg caught after a long run to the rear.

Without the aid of a hit the Nats scored a run off Uhle in the seventh. He opened the inning by hitting Lewis, and Welaj, who was sent in to run, raced to third when Higgins made a two-base muff of Pofahl's grounder. Bloodworth got Welaj home with a long hoist to Greenberg.

Carrasquel gave up a single to York with one out in the eighth and York raced to second when Chapman fumbled the ball, but the big Venezuelan disposed of Higgins and Bartell without trouble. He was in jeopardy in the ninth, however, when Bloodworth bobbled Pinch-hitter Campbell's grounder with none out. However, Bloodworth atoned for that misplay by grabbing Tebbetts line drive for a double play. Stainback tripled to center to prolong the rally, but Carrasquel tightened his belt and disposed of Gehringer on an easy grounder to Myer at second.

Radbourne, Star Pitcher of Old, To Be Honored

By the Associated Press

Bloomington, Ill., April 8.—Baseball oldtimers will pay tribute here May 1 to the great career of Charles (Old Hoss) Radbourne, the famous pitcher who died in 1897.

Radbourne, ace of the Providence, R. I., club, won 308 games in 12 years in the big time, winning 42 games in one season. He was 44 years old when he died here.

Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington club, has accepted an invitation to speak at the memorial program. Griffith and Radbourne once were pitching rivals when they attended Illinois State Normal and Illinois Wesleyan, respectively, in Bloomington. Commissioner K. M. Landis and other baseball notables will be invited to attend.

A plaque similar to the one which commemorates Radbourne in the Cooperstown Hall of Fame will be placed on his grave here.

Large Offer Made to Buy Rams' Eleven

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 8.—Cleveland Rams' officials are considering "a substantial offer" from an Eastern group for the National Professional Football League club here, President Edward P. Bruch of the Rams said today.

Bruch did not give further details, but the Cleveland News said the franchise proposition probably came from Boston, and was believed to be "pretty close to $150,000," or enough to cover the Rams' losses of "more than $100,000" in the four years in the league.

Boston formerly was represented in pro football's No. 1 league, but the franchise was transferred to Washington several years ago.

It was understood some directors wished to take the offer and that others desired to keep the franchise in Cleveland, pointing out that new clubs usually take losses for several years before beginning to show a profit.

The Rams are coached by Earl (Dutch) Clark, former Colorado College All-American.

Fans Disappointed

Tony returned to his corner holding up the supposedly injured paw after slamming it into the right side of Baer's head twice as the bell ended the sixth. But the 8,500 who paid out an estimated $30,000 to see Baer and Galento make a bid for a fight with heavyweight champion Joe Louis thought otherwise. They thought Galento's "hand trouble" came from Baer's hands and that Tony had had about all he could absorb.

Galento's face was a bloody pulp when he returned to his corner to sit out the rest of the scheduled ten-round brawl, for young Buddy had punched it almost unceasingly while on the retreat from the ever-charging Orange (N. J.) beer baron.

Tony won only one round on The Post score sheet, and that was the first. He began to tire as the fight progressed and appeared about to go out for the count in the fifth when Buddy opened up with a fast attack.

Baer Impressive

Buddy, who had an advantage of 11 inches in reach and 10 inches in height over the squat, obese bartender, fought a gala fight and kept throwing short left hooks into Galento's face on the infighting and keeping him off with a long left jab when Tony tried to charge.

Galento, however, forced the fighting up until the fifth round, when he began to tire and resort more and more to the roughhouse tactics which made him famous in the ring. There were no knockdowns, although both boys fell through the ropes in true examples of their "bumhood" time after time.

It was the kind of a brawl that pleased the cash customers, who set a new record for attendance at an indoor sports event in the Capital.

The finish called up memories of Max Baer's technical knockout victory over Galento last summer when Tony was so badly battered at the end of seven rounds that he couldn't answer the bell for the eighth.

DeChard Kayoes Foe

Jimmy DeChard, young Washington heavyweight boomed as the future champion, made an auspicious debut in the professional ranks by knocking out Joe Linsie, New York, in 2 minutes 26 seconds of the first round of the scheduled six-round semifinal.

Jimmy finished Linsie with a smashing right hand to the jaw and Referee Eddie LaFond counted him out. Although the charges were hurled immediately that Linsie was no fit opponent for Jimmy, DeChard showed plenty of talent in his first go as a professional. A knockout had been expected, but the first-round finish came as a surprise. DeChard weighed 186¼, Linsie 175¾.

At the ringside as the curtain rang up with Jackie Cranford and Roy Dunn, Washington middleweights, in the ring, was a large delegation of Congressmen, Government big-wigs and men prominent in the Capital's public life—including White House Secretary Steve Early, G-Man J. Edgar Hoover, District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen, David McCoach and J. Russell Young.

A Weird Affair

The Cranford-Dunn affair was a weird battle which saw both boys hit the floor for counts of nine. It was Cranford's debut in the professional end of the business, and the best he could do was gain a draw.

The second preliminary was a dull six-rounder which saw 234-pound Elza Thompson, blubbery sparring partner of Baer, take the six-round decision over Young Foster, DeCard's 185-pound sparring mate.

Herbie Katz, 174½, of New York, carried too many guns for Felix Del Paoli, 168½, of Philadelphia, and had Felix hanging helplessly on the ropes at the end of the third of their scheduled six.

Referee Charley Reynolds halted the business, called Herbie the winner by a technical knockout.

Stepping up the pace in the third six-rounder, Billy Banks, 130, Washington's classy little colored fighter, floored Pablo Dana, 126, of the Philippines in the fourth round and went on to a jab his way to decision.

Redskins Release Stiff 11-Game Schedule for 1941 Season

Face Giants Here Sept. 28 In Opener

Rams and Green Bay Back as Opponents; 73-0 Loss May Be Avenged on Nov. 16

Perturbed not in the least by the Selective Service Act which may swallow up several of their outstanding stars before the start of the season, the Washington Redskins yesterday announced an 11-game schedule for next fall.

Returning for the annual meeting in Chicago, the Redskin bosses said they were well pleased—despite the fact that they face the four toughest teams in the National Football League on successive Sundays at the end of the season.

The 'Skins will open their fall season days late, on September 28, in Griffith Stadium with the New York Giants, who were nosed out for second place in the Eastern Division by the Brooklyn Dodgers last fall.

Two teams the Redskins missed last year in their drive to the Eastern championship—the Cleveland Rams and the Green Bay Packers—are on this fall's card.

Rams Move In

Dutch Clark, former Detroit star, will bring the Rams to Washington October 26 for the first time since they came here in 1938. Green Bay will come here November 30—the first time since 1937 the Packers played here.

The Packers-Redskins game that year was one of the hardest fought contests ever seen at Griffith Stadium. Washington needed to win to gain the right to meet the Giants for the Eastern title and did win, 14-6. The 'Skins then went on to win the world championship over the Chicago Bears.

The 'Skins, incidentally, will get a chance to avenge that humiliating 73 to 0 defeat handed them by the Bears in the championship game here last fall when they go to Chicago to play George Halas' men on November 16.

The Redskins opened their season last fall on September 15, but they were unable to obtain an earlier date this year because of the late finish of the American League baseball season, General Manager Jack Espey said.

Dodgers Strong

Washington plays the Brooklyn Dodgers who under Jock Sutherland loom as the team to beat in this year's race—here October 5 in the second game, and then travels to Brooklyn's Ebbets Field, November 9, for the second game.

Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and the Giants appear on the Redskin schedule twice, while Coach Ray Flaherty's men face Green Bay, the Rams and the Chicago Bears only once. Green Bay and Cleveland replace the Detroit Lions and Chicago Cardinals on this year's schedule.

The Redskins will start training for the fall campaign on August 18—12 days later than last year. They will report—50 strong—to San Diego, Calif., August 17 and go to work the following day. While in camp, they will be quartered in the Brown Military Academy, about 10 miles from the heart of San Diego. The first intrasquad exhibition game will be played in San Diego September 6, and the club will then head back East, playing two other exhibitions en route in cities yet to be designated. HAILEY.

September 28, New York Giants at Washington.
October 5, Brooklyn Dodgers at Washington; 12, Washington at Pittsburgh; 19, Washington at Philadelphia; 26, Cleveland at Washington.
November 2, Pittsburgh at Washington; 9, Washington at Brooklyn; 16, Washington at Chicago (Bears); 23, Washington at New York; 30, Green Bay at Washington.
December 2, Philadelphia at Washington.

Terp Lacrosse Team Defeats Loyola, 11 to 3

Coming to life after a none too impressive first half, the Maryland lacrosse team beat Loyola of Baltimore, 11 to 3, at College Park yesterday to register its third straight victory in defense of its national crown.

Maryland's attack worked consistently well throughout, but some ragged defense made it tough for the Terps in the opening half and they went into intermission leading by only 5 to 3, as Loyola added a goal just before the whistle.

Chick Allen, of Maryland, scored the first goal of the game and the Terps never trailed, although the count was tied at 1-1 and 2-2. Then Maryland got three in a row and the issue was settled.

Maryland played much smoother as a team in the second half, and sparked by Ray Grelecki, who got three goals, added a trio in each of the last three quarters.

Loyola played good lacrosse and fought from start to finish.

Dot Kirby's Record 72 Holds Ga. Golf Lead

Mark Set by Patty Berg Falls As Atlanta Girl Takes 9-Stroke Edge in Titleholders Tourney

By the Associated Press

Augusta, Ga., April 8.—Firing a phenomenal 72, men's par for the route, lanky Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, established a new Augusta Country Club course record for women today while taking a nine-stroke lead through the 36 holes of the 54-hole Titleholders Tournament here.

Miss Kirby's sensational card, made up of three birdies, 13 pars and two bogies, lowered by one stroke the old record of 73 established in the inaugural tournament in 1937 by Minneapolis' Patty Berg. The former Georgia and Southern champion made the turn in 35 and posted 37 on the back nine after 3-putting the home green.

Tonight Miss Kirby's 152 total gave her a nine-stroke margin over Philadelphia's Helen Sigel and Greenville's Jane Cothran, who were tied for second with a 36-hole total of 161. Miss Sigel turned in a second-round card of 80, while Miss Cothran had 81.

In third place as the field prepared for the final 18 holes tomorrow was pretty Georgia Tainter, the Fargo, N. Dak., girl who duplicated her opening round 81 for a 162 total.

Grace Amory, West Palm Beach, Fla., and professional Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C., were deadlocked for fourth place with 166. Miss Amory needed a 5-over par 79 today, Miss Dettweiler 84. One shot behind was Marion Miley, the Lexington, Ky., veteran who soared to a second round 85.

Providence's Jean Bauer, with rounds of 86-83, had a 169 total and possession of sixth place in the field of 21 players.

Buddy Adair Wins 'Y' Tennis Crown

Ralph (Buddy) Adair yesterday scored his first tournament victory over Davie Johnsen when he upset the defending champion in the finals of the fourth annual Y. M. C. A. indoor tennis championships. The scores were 6—0, 7—5, 6—2.

Both members of the Edgemoor Club, Johnsen and Adair have been rivals for several years, but always Davie, now a G. W. star, has had the upper hand. Last year Johnsen won the Middle Atlantic tournament here.

En route to the finals Adair eliminated A. E. Yeatman, James Bowman and Richard T. Mahony, while Johnsen beat Felix Silva, Ted Pierce and David Smith.

Navy Answers Accusation Of 'Crow-ism'

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., April 8.—Rear Admiral Russell Willson, superintendent of the Naval Academy, said tonight that Navy would play any athletic team on its schedule regardless of the "composition of that team."

Admiral Willson made this assertion in a statement explaining the departure from Annapolis of Lucian Alexis, jr., of New Orleans, Negro member of the Harvard lacrosse team, on the eve of the Harvard-Navy game here last Saturday, which Navy won, 12 to 0.

The Harvard Crimson, undergraduate daily, said the university had "kowtowed to intolerant Jim Crowism" in withdrawing Alexis from the game. William Bingham, Harvard athletic director, said "Annapolis objected very violently" to the Negro player's participation and "we thought we should do what they asked us to do."

Admiral Willson's statement said: "When the Harvard lacrosse team arrived at the Naval Academy, the authorities were surprised to find that one member of the team was a Negro.

"He was received with every courtesy and accorded every privilege of a member of a visiting team—as was to be expected at the Naval Academy, where a few years ago there had been a Negro midshipman.

"When the coach (Harvard Coach Richard Snibbe, former St. John's College of Annapolis lacrosse player) stated that the Negro would play in the game, I telephoned the director of athletics at Harvard and told him that while the Naval Academy would play any team that Harvard put on the field, I felt that Harvard should have informed us in advance of this situation.

"Mr. Bingham expressed his regrets and said he would handle the matter by telegram. The next morning I was informed that the Negro player had left Annapolis the night before.

"The Naval Academy always has and always will play any team on its playing schedule at the apponited time and place whatever the composition of that team."

Chapman's 69 Leads Field At Pinehurst

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., April 8.—Dick Chapman, national amateur golf champion, led a field of 138 starters today in the North and South championship with a 35-34—69 over the par-72 championship course of the Pinehurst Country Club.

Thirty players cracked 80 and six tied at 80 for the last two places in the match-play division. A play-off for those places will be held tomorrow. Among those seeking the two spots will be George T. Dunlap, jr., defending champion, and former national amateur champ.

Chapman, who was brought up on the Pinehurst courses, and who recently beat all the amateurs in the Augusta, Ga., tournament, never putted better. He was down in one putt on 13 greens and finished with 23 putts. He beat out Frank Strafaci, of New York, for the medal by a single stroke. Strafaci, former metropolitan and North and South amateur titlist, took a five at the final hole when somebody laughed at the wrong time and Frank mishit the ball.

W. B. (Duff) McCullough, of Philadelphia, runner-up for the National; Walter Burkemo, of Chicago, and Skip Alexander, of Durham, N. C., tied for third place with par rounds of 72.

Ralph Bogart (Army and Navy Club), of Washington, qualified with a well-played 38, 37—75.

His card—
Out ..... 5 5 3 4 4 3 5 5 4—38
In ..... 6 4 4 4 6 3 4 3 3—37—75

Bogart was the last to start and returned just before dusk.

PGA Creates Hall of Fame; Elects Four

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 8.—Creation of golf's hall of fame by the Professional Golfers Association, with Bobby Jones, Francis Ouimet, Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen the first stars to be honored with membership, was announced today by the P. G. A. president, Tom Walsh.

Plans call for erection of a shrine for the game at Augusta, Ga., similar to baseball's hall of fame at Cooperstown, N. Y., Walsh said. James M. Cox, former Governor of Ohio, has been named chairman of a committee to raise funds for the building.

Women also will be eligible for election to membership in the hall of fame, Walsh said, adding that two members will be selected for membership each year by sports writers of the nation. Jones, Ouimet, Hagen and Sarazen were selected by the P. G. A. Hall of fame committee consisting of Grantland Rice, chairman; O. B. Keeler, the Atlanta Journal; A. Linde Fowler, Boston Transcript, and Kerr Petrie, the New York Herald Tribune. The idea was that of Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament bureau manager.

Skill Not Necessary

"All persons who have contributed to the welfare of the game in an outstanding manner will be eligible," Walsh said. "Membership will be open to those persons even though they were born in another country. Recognition will be based not only on skill as a player but also on outstanding service to golf in other fields of activity. It is the wish of the P. G. A. that the hall of fame be continued along the broadest possible lines and that the selection committee and the sports writers of the country have full and complete jurisdiction in naming persons selected."

Jones, the Georgia star, who now competes only once a year—in the Masters, won last Sunday by Craig Wood—won four National Opens, five National Amateurs and three British Opens. Ouimet won two National Amateur crowns and his 1913 National Open victory, which he scored at the age of 20 on a play-off against the British aces, Harry Vardon and Ted Ray, generally is credited with making the Nation golf-conscious.

Hagen Most Colorful

Hagen, the famed "Sir Walter" of the game and its most colorful figure, took four British opens, two national opens and five P. G. A. titles. Sarazen, only one of the four still starring on the game's bigtime competitive front, won two national opens and tied Lawson Ltitle for the title last June at Cleveland, losing a play-off. He won three P. G. A. crowns and took the 1932 British open. This winter he teamed with Ben Hogan to take the Miami International Four-Ball Championship.

Jones and Sarazen are 39, nine years younger than Hagen and Ouimet.

Types Rally, Gain Finals Of Cage Play

Digging itself out of a deficit going into the last quarter, United Typewriter basketball team reached the finals of the D. C. Recreation Department tournament last night at Tech, beating Marion A. C., 30 to 24.

The Typists thus earned a meeting tonight with Naiman Photos for the title. Play at Techc gym will start at 8 p. m., capping a tourney which started January 4 with 104 teams in competition.

For the first three periods last night the teams battled on even terms. At the half Marion held a slim 13-to-10 edge. Then the Typists came back slightly to trail by only 22 to 21 at the end of the third quarter.

Led by "Reds" Auerbach, U. T. finally put on one of the finest rallies of the season to win going away. Auerbach stole scoring honors of the game with 12 points.

Gene Sarazen Will Practice Here Today

Headed by colorful, little Gene Sarazen, most of the topflight golf professionals who will participate in British War Relief matches at Chevy Chase Country Club tomorrow will arrive in Washington some time today and take part in practice rounds at the scene of the benefit.

Telegrams from Sarazen and Jimmy Thompson, blond slugger, yesterday announced the day of arrival, and it was expected Horton Smith, Clayton Heafner, Jim Ferrier and George Dawson would accompany their touring mates here on the trip North from the recent Masters Tournament in Georgia.

A luncheon at Chevy Chase will open tomorrow's affair, at which Lord Halifax, Ambassador of Great Britain, will be the guest of honor along with Lady Halifax. They may remain until teeing-off time at 1:30.

Pairings have not been announced yet, but they probably will be revealed today. Six local professionals will be included in the matches. Participants' share in the benefit, it was decided yesterday, will be gold cigarette cases engraved with the British emblem.

JimCavanaugh Rolls 176 for Bowling High

Totaling 176 in a game in which he had but one spare, Jim Cavanaugh, Old Home Cafe, sparked the Georgetown Commercial Loop at Ed Schlegel's alleys last night. Cavanaugh's splendid game was featured by the one spare and six strikes and in his entire set of 403 there were only four spares but he managed the big count with nine strikes.

Ed Leigh, Sam's Men's Shop, took top set with 404 which led to high team set of 1,784 and the odd game over Chappell Billiards despite the latter's high team game of 662. Larry Smith helped his Chappell boys with a 395 set while George Clark's 386 enabled the Thompson Welding quintet to score a sweep over C. B. Long regardless of Chuck Klein's 152 and Jim Stanton's 167 for the losers.

BROOKLAND RECREATION

The Diamond Cab boys found that Slim Erhmantrout had high single of 142 which was the reason his Northeast team was able to win high game with a 590 count. George Simons, Brightwood, was the best man for set, his 357 topping them all. Amoco took the high team set after knocking over 1,619 pins. Restaurant and Mount Pleasant top the league, the former two games to the good.

ICE PALACE

The Office Appliance boys saw the IBM No. 2 boys forge three games out in front by virtue of a sweep over National Cash Register, making their leadership more secure. Helped by "Shoes" Boteler's nice 369 set, the IBM No. 2 lads won the team highs with 581 and 1,677. Roge Johnson, Monroe, was top single man, getting a 133 count to lead.

TAKOMA RECREATION

The Electrical League featured H. Chaney, E. B. Adams and John Anderson, Cameo, as top men for game and set with 152 and 422, respectively. Anderson's big set plus a nice 146 game, enabled his Cameo team to take three straight from Atlantic Electric and highs of 628 and 1,781 as well, while Adams won the odd tilt from Redmon & Brown. Cameo cinched the flag with their three wins of the night.

SILVER SPRING

It was all Liberty Wall Paper last night in the American League. Frank Hines' top single of 159, Johnny Nicro's 429 set and Charley Mehler's near-high 41' sparked the Liberty boys and helped win three straight from Wright Jewelers and team highs of 649 and 1,850 as well. Silver Spring Market, Diamond Appliance and Liberty Wall Paper top the league in the order named.

Postscripts . . .

Charlotte, N. C., April 8.—It will be George Archie at first base for the Nats on opening day whether the New York pitching is right or left-handed. . . . Bucky Harris has decided to give the red head an unobstructed shot at the job, against his former plan of alternating Archie with Jim Vernon, according to the pitching. . . . Cecil Travis was granted two days' leave from the Nats to visit his 74-year-old dad who is ill in Riverdale, Ga. . . . Ben Chapman today reported the soreness in his throwing arm vanished over night, just as the Miami physician who treated him had predicted. . . . Clark Griffith beamed today when for the first time he laid eyes on the new Charlotte stadium he built for his Piedmont League farm team at a cost of $50,000. . . . Shining new stands seat 6,000 fans and the playing field is an honest test of batting ability, with high fences in both left and right field being 343 feet from the plate and the center field wall 440 feet distant. . . . The Charlotte team had been working out here a week, but not a ball had been hit out of the park until the Nats and Tigers took batting practice today. . . . Then Mickey Vernon, Jake Early, Hank Greenberg and Charley Gehringer bumped pitches over the fence. . . . The 6,000 fans and $5,000 gate today's game attracted were enough to make Charlotte a regular stop on the barnstorming itinerary of the Nats and Tigers in future years. . . . The game netted them more money than any other exhibition of the spring. . . . Jimmy Bloodworth, whose new-found speed on the bases has been an amazing development of the spring campaign, today confessed that he had taken lessons during the winter from a track coach. . . . "I found out I wasn't running with my legs, I was dragging 'em," said Bloodworth. . . . In the fifth inning today, Chapman demonstrated that his arm was no longer sore. . . . From moderately deep left field he poured a ball into the plate on the line. . . . Buck Newsom threw his rainbow slow ball once too often today. . . . George Case, on first at the time, was off with the pitch and virtually had second stolen before Buck's pitch reached the plate. . . . George Archie didn't hurt his chances of winning the first base job in the seventh inning when he performed the difficult feat of stretching for Lewis' throw into the dirt and keeping his spikes on the bag at the same time. . . . Tomorrow, it's the Nats vs. the Tigers at Greenville, S. C., with Sid Hudson and Harold Newhouser the pitching gents.—POVICH.

Happy Hunting Is Beaten by a Neck, With Sun Triad a Nose From Place

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Bowie, Md., April 8.—In a thrilling three-way photo finish, E. K. Bryson's Cavalier scored a neck victory over George A. Garrett's Happy Hunting before 9,000 customers this sunny afternoon. The third member of the blanket drive, beaten a nose for second money, was William F. Hitt's Sun Triad. Only two others competed in the 6-furlong event, named the Chelton Purse and located fifth on the eight-race program.

Cavalier was the twenty-fifth favorite to win in 53 races and was urged by Jockey Mannie Berg, of Baltimore. The son of By-Pass II and Blonde Belle was purchased by Owner Bryson from the Brandon Stable during the past winter. He performed in the interests of the favorite players and paid a $4.70 mutuel. The race was run over a fast track and Cavalier turned in time of 1:14 2-5 for the three-quarters of a mile.

The field was reduced to five by the scratch of Tragic Ending, owned and trained by W. J. (Buddy) Hirsch, whose mother died in New York this morning.

Happy Hunting Blocked Out

But for poor racing luck, Happy Hunting would have been the winner. The son of Happy Argo raced from the No. 1 position and was well placed on the inside when he was blocked by the tiring Swynstan, Jockey V. Polk was forced to pull up and send the horse to the outside. Meanwhile, Cavalier had gone to the front and Happy Hunting missed getting up by a narrow margin.

This was the second victory of the program for Owner Bryson and Jockey Berg. This combination was in charge of Intruding in the first race and the daughter of Pair by Pair hung a half-length defeat on the Cannaday Farm's About Face. The well-played Smart, owned by Gustave Ring, of Washington, was third in the field of 10.

Intruding was a $6.90 shot and was nursed along by Berg in good fashion. It was well, however, that Berg went into a hard drive in the closing sixteenth for the long shot, About Face, closed with a mighty rush.

$95.60 Daily Double

There was a $95.60 pay-off on the daily double when the Tourneur Stable's Addis, beaten off badly last out, rallied to win the second race in going-away fashion. Time Passes took the lead in the stretch but Claggett could not keep the son of Time Maker going. My Lawyer, pacemaker most of the way, was third in the field of a dozen sprinters.

Dispose, Derby Choice, Praised By Trainer Crump

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., April 8.—Dispose, the leading favorite in one Kentucky Derby winterbook at 5-2, is "just one 'elluva horse, and I don't mean maybe," says Bill Crump, trainer of the secondary string of racers for King Ranch, owner of Dispose.

"Yes, sir," said Crump today, "you can bet he's a good horse as you'll find out Derby Day. I don't say he's going to win the Derby, for Bold Irishman and Our Boots will be in there pitching, but he's going to be a hard horse to handle."

Trained by the veteran Max Hirsch, who trained Bold Venture, 1936 surprise Derby champion, Dispose projected himself into the Derby picture by winning the Flamingo and the Bahamas Stakes in Florida this winter.

Continued Crump:

Trainer James Everman Dies in Lexington, Ky.

Lexington, Ky., April 8 (AP)—James Everman, 66, widely known horse trainer, died today after a brief illness. Among the horses he trained was Governor Gray, which ran second to Meridian in the 1911 Kentucky Derby after going to the post a strong favorite.

PORT MELODY, first away, went evenly.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

The Potomac is running high and is riled considerably. In fact, it's what most anyone would call muddy. And as long as it stays so there is little chance of catching white perch, even though there is no doubt but what they are already in the upper river.

ACKERMAN

Several days without rain over the Potomac watershed should see them taking worms like nobody's business.

Perhaps the alleged advance in food prices is responsible, or again it might just be a taste for luxuries beyond the means of the average man that cost Joe Nieser, a Miamian, a possible hundred dollars recently to entertain four people at dinner. He wanted pompano for his guests and he had it, the expensive way.

Fishing in Biscayne Bay from Biscayne Island, Neiser caught a six-pound pompano, which he carefully weighed on his own scales, went home and cut it in steaks, and entertained royally for dinner. But on the last mouthful Joe nearly choked, lasped into unconsciousness, and it took a doctor ot bring him back to normalcy.

He had forgoten to present his pompano at an official weighing station of the Miami Fishing tournament. That was one of the greatest errors of his life, for had he done so he unquestionably would have taken the lead for the grand prize—something in excess of a hundred bucks. In addition he would have received a case of ale, an autographed copy of Phil Wylie's new book "Salt Water Daffy," and probably had his name emblazoned on the list of all time winners in the annual tourney, for the top pompano since the inception of the tourney is a half pound less than his fish weighed.

Joe had his scales tested, but even that wouldn't make the catch official. For that matter, there is nothing he can do now that would, but he can point with pride to having had a most expensive dinner. Pompapno has always sold high, about a dollar to the consumer, or 30 cents to the fisherman, but in Joe's case a new all-time high has been established—about $20 a pound, a figure that will probably send Fulton marketmen into a tailspin.

But is Neiser discouraged? No sir, not Joe; he's made of the stuff it takes for real anglers. He says when bigger pompano are caught he'll catch them.

The question most asked, and probably hardest for us to answer, is "Give me full information about the fishing in the Washington area with seasons and the best places to go."

In fact, that question is unanswerable—we have been trying for years to answer it by letter and have only partially succeeded, after writing a couple of million words about it. And we're still trying.

But after all, for a stranger in this neck of the woods, it is a perfectly natural question; and we can only remind him of what it would be to walk in a well stocked sports store, never having seen one before, and try to pick out a well-balanced outfit for a particular kind of angling. But we'll keep on trying to tell of this area, covering over a thousand square miles of territory, if the questions can be but confined to a particular fishing and a reasonably small area.*

RFC Notes Offered

The Treasury offered $600,000,000 worth of RFC notes for sale yesterday on behalf of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Investors were given a choice between two types of notes. The Treasury offered $300,000,000 of seven-eighths of 1 per cent RFC notes maturing in approximately 1½ years, and $300,000,000 of 1⅛ per cent RFC notes maturing in about 2¼ years.

The notes will be the first issued by the RFC which will be fully subject to Federal taxes under recent legislation.

The RFC will use most of the proceeds in connection with its financing of defense projects and purchase of defense materials, but about $175,000,000 of the proceeds were expected to be used to reimburse the Treasury for capital furnished the corporation during its early years.

Stock Prices Relapse on Balkan Reports; Steels and Rails Bear Brunt of Heavy Sales

New York, April 8.—The stock market today took one of its worst beatings in the past five months as selling in volume was touched off by what Wall Street considered bearish implications of the Balkan war news.

Steels, rails and assorted industrials bore the brunt of offerings with losses of 1 to more than 3 points. New lows for the year were registered by such pivotals as U. S. Steel and Chrysler. Closing quotations were not far from the day's bottom.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks ended with a net drop of .9 of a point at 41. Except for February 14, it was the severest relapse in the barometer since November 6. Dealings, fast at the start and around midday, slowed in the latter part of the session. Transfers totaled 735,000 shares against 359,770 the day before.

The breadth of the market was exemplified by the fact 823 individual issues were traded compared with 645 yesterday. Of these 670 were off, 42 up and 111 unchanged.

Financial quarters apparently viewed as depressing dispatches telling of Nazi successes in Yugoslavia and elsewhere, as well as British reports of recent heavy British shipping casualties.

While business news generally was constructive, steels had to contend with the thought that governmental price "ceilings" might be placed on the metal and producers thus prevented from offsetting mounting wages and other costs.

General Motors got a little support and held its set-back to ⅝ of a point when the company announced sales for March and the first quarter were the largest for any month and initial quarter in the concern's history.

Prominent losers included Bethlehem Steel, Youngstown Sheet, U. S. Rubber, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Southern Pacific, Pere Marquette preferred, Douglas Aircraft, Sears Roebuck, Westinghouse, du Pont, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Anaconda, Kennecott, and Western Union.

White Sewing Machine was an exception, rising 9 points to 50, a new 1941 top, on a single sale, the first since mid-February.

Secondary corporate bonds, particularly those in the recently climbing railway group, were as weak as stocks. Commodities also turned downward. Wheat at Chicago was off 1½ to 1¾ cents a bushel and corn unchanged to ⅝ lower. Cotton lost 45 to 60 cents a bale.

Falling 1 to more than 3 in the curb were Aluminum of America, Jones & Laughlin, Humble Oil, Electric Bond & Share preferred, Babcock & Wilcox, Todd Shipyards, and Singer Manufacturing. The turnover here was around 114,000 shares versus 57,000 Monday.

Many bonds were off 1 to more than 4 points at the close. The decline in rails wiped out a substantial part of the recent advance in that group, particularly obligations of roads in receivership or in varying degrees of financial difficulty in recent years.

International Hydro Electric broke more than 4 points to 44½. Southern Railway 4s were off 2½ at 60½, Missouri-Kansas-Texas 5s down 2⅛ at 25⅝ and New York Central 5s off nearly 2 at 65¼.

Losing 1 to more than 2 were Walworth 4s, Pennsylvania general 4½s, Frisco 4½s, Nickel Plate 4½, Erie 5s, International Telephone 5s and Rock Island general 4s.

U. S. Government loans moved up a bit for a while, then eased in late dealings. Final prices in the over-the-counter market, where trading continued after the close of the stock market, were mostly down a shade in the Treasury list, traders said.

British Empire issues slipped with domestic corporates, resulting in losses of a point or more in Australia 4½s of 1956 and Canada 4s of 1960. Japan 6½s dropped 1⅝ to 62.

Transactions increased to $10,997,900, face value, from $6,991,700 in the previous session.

Concrete Tests Of New Bidding Rule Awaited

By the Associated Press

New York, April 8.—A new order by the Securities and Exchange Commission requiring competitive bidding for public utility issues of more than $1,000,000 may bring important changes in the distribution of utility securities, investment banking circles said today.

Certain large underwriting houses, including Morgan, Stanley & Co., Inc., now specializing in the wholesaling of securities, may enter the retailing end through their own distribution organizations instead of through smaller investment dealers, it was explained.

Realignment of connections between utility systems and banking houses likewise may result over the long run, bankers suggested. However, the immediate results were obscure as banking firms waited concrete tests of the rule when big utility flotations come up for discussion.

Effective May 7

The rule, effective May 7, was announced just as financial quarters were looking ahead to extensive utility offerings growing out of liquidation and rearrangement of operating properties under the holding company integratoin program.

Morgan, Stanley & Co., organized by partners formerly with J. P. Morgan & Co., withheld comment while waiting further study of the commission's ruling.

Otis & Co., of Cleveland, one of the few firms which openly advocated competitive bidding, issued a statement saying the decision "restores to the field of public utility finance the traditional competition of the American business system."

The firm expressed the belief the SEC ruling foreshadowed similar competitive bidding requirements by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Power Commission, the Federal Communications Commission and State utility commissions for corporations under their jurisdictions.

Assails "Monopolies"

"The public interest," said Otis & Co., will be well served by the extension of competitive bidding to securities issues of these other corporations which enjoy monopolies and are subject to public regulation."

Houses opposed to the practice contended the investment banker's relation to securities issues was of a confidential, professional nature, best served by removing new issues from the auction block.

They argued in hearings before the commisison that the investment public, too, in the long range would lose from overpricing of new issues and probable entry of underwriters into retail distribution, which might concentrate the selling in few hands.

Connely Protests Ruling

Fort Worth, Tex., April 8 (AP).—The ruling of the Securities Exchange Commission, requiring competitive bidding on new utility issues, brought a protest today from Emmett F. Connely, of Detroit, Mich., president o fthe Investment Bankers Association of America.

Connely, attending the seventh annual meeting of the Texas group of the I. B. A., declared the effect of the ruling may be disastrous to the smaller firms or dealers who make up the machinery of distribution.

"I was astonished to learn that the SEC had adopted the rule to take effect May 7," Connely said. "This proposal was supported publicly by only two firms out of some 6,000 registered.

"I believe that the commission has taken a most unwise and undesirable step and regret that they have been unwilling at least to try out some less drastic proposal such as we have suggested to them."

Militant Pennsy R. R. Investor Gets Special Train to Home

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 8.—After Pennsylvania Railroad officials told of larger dividends, increased freight and passenger revenues and a bright outlook for 1941 at the annual stockholders' meeting today—a minority stockholder rose to say, "The train service is terrible."

J. E. Geary, of Perryman, Md., had several complaints about the way the P. R. R. is run. When he finished, he got fast action from the chair.

Geary said he wasn't feeling well after making his speech and asked that a fast train be ordered to take him to his home in Perryman, where express trains never stop on regular schedule.

Dr. Thomas W. Gates, chairman at the annnual meeting, smilingly assured the militant stockholder his request would be carried out—and it was. A crack express from New York to Washington pulled up at the little Perryman station late this afternoon, the railroad reported, and a triumphant Mr. Geary climbed off.

F. J. Fr'l, jr., vice president and comptroller, read the annual report, asserting that "war conditions" had resulted in an increase of $46,662,630, or 10.8 per cent, in operating revenues for 1940.

* Fixed Capital and Common Stock and Surplus have been adjusted as follows: (a) for the year 1931 to give effect to a subsidiary acquired and merged in 1932, (b) for the years 1931 to 1934, inclusive, to give effect to the write-down in 1935 of fixed capital of subsidiaries in the amount of approximately $754,000, (c) for the years 1931 to 1939, inclusive, to give effect to the elimination of the accounts of The Bristol Traction Company, a former subsidiary, sold in 1940, and (d) for the years 1931 to 1934, inclusive, to give effect to the elimination of approximately $21,595,000 from the common stock and surplus of The Connecticut Electric Service Company (former parent of the Company) upon its merger in 1935 into the Company. At that time there were corresponding decreases (i) in consolidated fixed capital of approximately $18,598,000, representing the difference of approximately $17,158,000 between the recorded cost to the parent company of its holdings of common stock of the Company and the par value thereof and a reduction of approximately $1,440,000 in the recorded amounts of certain other fixed assets and (ii) in investments of approximately $2,997,000 representing the difference between the net recorded cost to the parent company of common stocks of certain subsidiaries and the amount at which the investment in these stocks was recorded on the books of the Company on said merger. Other miscellaneous net charges to surplus between December 31, 1931, and December 31, 1940, include approximately $1,100,000 for premiums on preferred stocks retired.

Commodities Depressed on Balkan News

By the Associated Press

Major commodities for future delivery moved decisively lower yesterday. Main cause for the recession appeared to be Balkan war reports.

Wheat, soybeans and lard dropped sharply in Chicago trade, while corn held relatively steady. Wheat closed 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 cents a bushel lower and corn unchanged to 3/8 off.

New York cotton dropped 45 to 60 cents a bale. Foreign and domestic liquidation met little support.

Some of the recently most buoyant staples posted the widest declines.

Hides lost .35 to .44 of a cent a pound, rubber ended unchanged to .30 of a cent lower, cottonseed oil .20 to .22 of a cent and Straits tin .20 to .25 of a cent.

Other supplies under fire included coffee, wool tops, silk and copper. Sugar was mixed, while cocoa held about unchannged.

Heavy Sales Tumble Wheat

Chicago, April 8 (AP).—Under a wave of liquidation, wheat futures prices suffered the severest reverses in a long time today, prices tumbling as much as 2 1/2 cents a bushel at times before recovering partially.

Corn and oats showed independent strength and held the losses to minor fractions, but wheat, rye and soybeans were decidedly weak.

Wheat finished the session with net losses for the day of 1 3/8 to 1 3/4, after dropping to 90, while July finished at 88 1/8@88 3/8, or 3/8 to 3/4 above the extreme low. Corn closed unchanged to 3/8 cents lower, May 66 3/8, July 67; oats 3/4@1/2 off; soybeans 2 3/8@2 5/8 down; rye 3/4@1/4 lower, and lard declined 1 1/2@25 cents a hundred.

Uneasiness over the war developments in the Balkans imparted weakness and many grain traders took up a position on the sidelines pending clarification of the outcome. Adjournment of Congress for the Easter holidays also removed a recent prop in the form of farm legislation news. Heavier marketings of loan wheat due to the recent advance in prices tended toward bearishness, as did favorable weather and crop news.

For the information of Wynn Murray fans, and those who probably will be, this is to announce that that popular songstress joins the Fred Allen "Star Theatre" tonight over CBS.

Wynn is the girl who came to Broadway and became one of its starring vocalists before she was 16. That was in "Babes in Arms," which produced a lot of other young singers, such as Ray Heatherton and Mitzi Green, and which ran for a full year on Broadway.

Since then Wynn has appeared in "The Boys From Syracuse," a revival of "Good News" and in "American Jubilee" at the New York's World's Fair and you've not only heard her previously on the Allen program, but on Ben Bernie's, Rudy Vallee's, Tommy Riggs' and Ed Gardner's "This is New York."

Wynn, who was born at Carbondale, Pennsylvania, began giving concerts at the age of 13 and it was at one of them, when she was 15, that a scout for "Babes in Arms" discovered her and brought her to New York for the show.

After talking so much about Wynn's extreme youthfulness, it would be logical to point out that she's a big girl now. But that isn't so, comparatively. Wynn was always pretty roly-poly and about a year ago she weighed a matter of 201 pounds. Within the past year she has reduced more than 85 pounds and weighs much less than she did at 16.

Contract Bridge

When today's hand was played in a seven-table duplicate game of the World Olmpic contest only two declarers succeeded in taking 12 tricks; one of the 7 pairs tried for a grand slam, the others bid four, five and six. How would you plan to fulfill the small-slam contract? West leads the king of hearts.

Suggested Answer

Declarer makes his contract by ruffing his ace of hearts with an otherwise worthless trump in order to conserve both possible long cards in the minor suit. When the dummy goes down, South sees a possible loser in each suit outside of hearts. His trump length discloses a chance to use his trump loser, if any, as a throw-in card to ease his situation in the plain suits. To this end North trumps the opening lead, and a small trump is played to declarer's ace. The heart ace is then led and ruffed in dummy, another spade is played from North, and West is stuck in the lead. Owing to the breaks, West cannot exit without giving declarer his small slam.

Dr. F.L. Benton Found Dead In His Home

Dr. Frederick Leslie Benton, 66, prominent Washington physician, was found shot to death yesterday in his home, White Haven, 4928 Reservoir Road Northwest, overlooking the Potomac River.

His body was found on the floor of a second-story bedroom in the historic home, one of the oldest in Washington, by two friends, Henry Evans, of Clarendon, Va., and Glendon Myers, of McLean, Va., at 7:30 p. m.

Myers and Evans had been unable to determine the whereabouts of Dr. Benton since he was dismissed shortly after noon from the Naval Hospital, where he had been under treatment for three weeks for a nervous condition. Evans gained admittance to the darkened house with a key he had obtained so that his wife could prepare meals for Dr. Benton. Mrs. Benton is ill in a hospital here.

Wife Is Ill

No notes were found, according to Detective Sergt. Jerry Flaherty, who investigated.

Friends said Dr. Benton had been increasingly despondent over the illness of his wife. They were married in 1916. She was Miss Edith Keyes, of Cadiz, Ohio.

Dr. Benton had been engaged in the practice, with offices in the Farragut Building, since his retirement in 1929 from the Navy Medical Corps with the rank of commander.

Since 1917 he had served as a Navy medical officer in Cuba, Haiti, Santo Domingo, China, the Philippines, Nicaragua, Panama and Washington. He held the Dominican Republic's Order of Merit.

A native of Oil City, Pa., and descendant of Andrew Benton, who settled Milford, Conn., in 1635, Dr. Benton obtained a B. S. degree from Temple University; A. M. from St. John's College, Md.; M. D. from Columbia University and University of Havana, and D. Sc. from American University. He had been a resident of Washington since 1920.

Belonged to Many Groups

He was a member of the District Medical Society, American Medical Association, American College of Surgeons, Army and Navy Club, Military Order of the Dragon, Military Order of the Carabao and American Legion.

He was a trustee of the Washington Archeological Society and the Spanish Institute and honorary medical adviser of the American University Graduate School. He was also a thirty-second degree Mason.

As a hobby, he made a study of the history of the Spanish conquest of America and Spanish art, language and literature.

Ensign Miller's Rites Tomorrow In Silver Spring

Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery. He had been ill for several months.

Born in Evanston, N. Dak., Mr. Miller enlisted in the British army when in his youth. He was one of the few Americans who served in the Boer War.

In 1907 he joined the United States Navy and saw service in the World War when he trained aviators at Pensacola, Fla., and in Italy. After the war he became technical adviser in aeronautics at the Navy Department, a post he held until his retirement in 1940.

A resident of Silver Spring for 12 years, Miller formerly lived in Washington. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mamie Miller, and four children, Mrs. Ralston Irvine, of New York; Lieut. Comdr. William Miller, stationed in Seattle, Wash.; Stanley Miller and Miss Mary Miller, both of Silver Spring.
